Karate-expert Steve Beattie

Triple-slayer changes mind, begs for life

Pro-death MP: 'I love' brother

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — Triple murderer Steve Beattie begged a judge to sentence him to death after a jury found him guilty. Now he has changed his mind.

"Even the worst man has the right to life," Beattie said. "Only God can take a life."

The 37-year-old karate expert — a death row prisoner at Florida State Prison near Starke for seven months — made the statement Monday after his brother — a Canadian MP — said he favors the death penalty and will vote to restore capital punishment when the issue comes up in Parliament.

DUNCAN BEATTIE, 50-year-old Tory MP for Hamilton Mountain, said he will not avoid the issue even though his brother has been sentenced to die in the electric chair in Florida.

"I still believe in the death penalty though I love him very much,' Beattie said in an interview with CBC television.

Stephen Beattie, whose sentence is automatically appealed under Florida's death penalty law, also was interviewed by the CBC. He said he understands his brother's position but does not agree with him.

"It's legalized murder, that's what it is is — premieditated, legalized murder," he said.

THE CONDEMNED man said there is always the possibility an innocent man will be executed. He said evidence used to convict him could not have been used in Canada or Europe.

Beattie, was convicted of killing his business partner, John Mitchell and cleaning women Patricia Beck, 18, and Carol Raduazzo, 34.

The three were found shot to death at the World of Health Spa in North Miami Beach on July 23, 1978. Mitchell and Steve Beattie were co-owners of the spa.

The strongest evidence against Beattie was a fingerprint lifted from the leg of one of the cleaning women. Experts testified the print belonged to Beattie.

BEATTIE, BORN IN Scotland, moved to Canada with his father, a professional fighter, when he was seven. He came to Miami in the early 1960s.

He held a number of jobs: working as abouncer for a Miami club, a boxing manager and fight promoter and sometimes as a bodyguard for visiting celebrities, such as Elvis Presley. He also taught karate.

Duncan Beattie, was first elected to the House of Commons in 1972, was defeated in 1976 but re-elected this year.

114 rescued from storm

Colonist wire services

PLYMOUTH, England — Storm-crippled yachts limped or were towed into port in Ireland and southwestern England early today as the death toll mounted in the biggest yacht racing disaster in history.

At least 10 yachtsmen were reported dead, seven were missing and hundreds more were unaccounted for as ships, lifeboats and helicopters searched the Atlantic through the night for victims of 120-kilometre-an-hour gales which turned the classic Fastnet ocean race into a desperate fight for survival.

The Royal Ocean Racing Club, sponsors of the race, said most of those not heard from were expected to be out of danger as winds subsided.

The club said about 30 yachts were sunk or abandoned, 114 persons were rescued and about another 100 boats were safe.

Canadian boats safe

Two of the the three official Canadian challengers in the 970-kilometre (605-mile) classic climax to the Admiral's Cup series were among the craft reported to have reached safety.

The RORC said that Pachena, skippered by John Newton of the Vancouver Yacht Club, sought shelter in Cork, Ireland, and Evergeen, skippered by Don Green of the Royal Hamilton Yacht Club, retired from the race and put into Plymouth.

The third yacht, Magistri, skippered by Charles Bentley of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, Toronto, was reported to have been sighted by search aircraft and was apparently continuing the race.

A fourth Canadian yacht, Manitou, skippered by Ken Merrow, formerly of Oakville, Ont., also started the race but pulled out early with a damaged mast and returned to Cowes, on the Isle of Wight.

Mayor William Vogel of the Vancouver suburb of Surrey was reported aboard the British yacht Jaujaime, owned by construction magnate Sir Maurice Laing. A crew member who stayed ashore during the race told a Vancouver radio station that the yacht had been sighted by the Royal Navy and he assumed those on board were in good condition.

Among craft unaccounted for were the three official U.S. entries — Imp, Aries and Williwaw — and a training vessel from the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., with 14 crew aboard.

The Tenacious, skippered by Ted Turner, owner of the Atlanta Braves baseball team, was safe, the RORC reported.

The British military rescue co-ordination centre in Plymouth said the gales caused three known deaths

Grain clog given short shift by shoremen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Grain exports through this West Coast port are being delayed and grain terminal workers face layoffs as longshoremen stay away from working day shifts when they are paid only straight time, port officials say.

The officials said Tuesday the situation has resulted in an unprecedented backlog of grain cars waiting to be unloaded.

Officials of the longshoremen's union said there is a shortage of workers because of summer vacations and the problem will be eliminated by the end of the month.

Grain terminal operators said, however, that there is no shortage of longshoremen who show up for the night shift, for which they are paid at time-and-a-half rates.

The harbormaster's office said there were 22 grain ships in port, with nine filling available berths and the others at anchor.

Grounded ferry: No malfunction

There is no evidence that mechanical failure contributed to the grounding of the ferry Queen of Alberni last week on route to Swartz Bay, B.C. Ferry Corp. officials said Tuesday.

However, they said no details of the accident will be released until an investigation by Transport Canada is completed.

The ferry is expected to be out of service service for at least a month and repairs will cost close to $1 million.

The ferry's damaged gearbox will probably have to be replaced.

The ferry was hung up on a reef in Active Pass for about 14 hours until it was pulled free by tugs.

Forest douser ablaze

A water bomber which caught fire while fighting a forest fire has caused just one more problem for the harried B.C. Forest Service.

A Canso water bomber, owned by Flying Fireman Ltd., a company that works out of Pat Bay Airport, caught fire Monday near Port Alberni. While the pilot was able to land the plane safely in nearby Sproat Lake to douse the flames, burning debris falling from the wing started some smaller fires in the woods.

The plane was under contract to the forest service and the new fires were attacked by the remaining fire bombers in the area Tuesday and brought under control, a forest service spokesman said.

A Flying Fireman spokesman said Tuesday the company was still trying to determine the cause of the fire, which broke out in the plane's right engine and caused damage to the wing and body, putting the plane out of action idefinitely.

"We've no idea what caused it—engine, electrical, or what," he said.

They hitched ride to a horror tale

By CP and staff

A Victoria teenager, who along with her wounded boyfriend spent six nightmarish nights held captive by an armed man, said she was not killed because she stayed calm.

Dena Vinqvist left a note saying, "Please help, this is no joke," in a Hinton, Alta. gas station on Monday and RCMP ended the ordeal 15 minutes later with the arrest of Denis McCullough, 38, who had been out on a day pass from Kingston Penitentiary.

A police spokesman said McCullough was in custody in Edmonton while authorities continue the investigation.

The incident began Aug. 5 in Sudbury, Ont. when Miss Vinqvist, of 1525 Hillside, and Philip White, who lived in a Gorge Road apartment, and on the homeward leg of a hitchhiking trip, were picked up by a man heading west.

White
. . . stabbed in lung

There was no sign of trouble until Winnipeg, where Miss Vinqvist wanted to stop to purchase a gift for a girlfriend.

McCullough refused and pulled out a knife, forcing White to sit under the dashboard of the car.

Dena said McCullough, now in custody in Edmonton, gave them two stories.

The first was that he had been involved in a heroin ring and had to get a boat so that he could escape to an island in the South Pacific.

Vinqvist

"He said he wanted to be free, that's all he wanted," Dena recalled.

Later that night, as the two 17-year-olds slept in the back seat, White was stabbed in the back.

"I thought he was dead," Miss Vinqvist said. "There was blood everywhere. He had a hole in his lung so there was a horrible sound and blood kept spurting out."

Miss Vinqvist kept pleading with the man to allow White to live "so he said 'I'll stitch him up.' " And he did, closing White's wound with a safety pin and a needle and thread.

"From that point on it was just straight driving. He changed his mind and decide he had to get Philip to Victoria as soon as possible."

Miss Vinqvist said her captor had a lot of picnics along the way, buying good food and putting out a blanket on a number of occasions, but one time south of Prince George, she was given a horror-filled choice.

"He said, 'You can have Philip alive, we'll carry him into the woods for someone to find or I'll finish him off now.'

"So we gathered up Philip's items and walked him back to the woods. A belt was put around his neck and his arms were tied down but I left some razor blades on the ground. I stood on them so he (the captor) wouldn't see them."

Miss Vinqvist left the car's licence plate number on the inside of White's wrist under his watchband and also mailed a note to the RCMP, not received until well after her rescue, telling them his whereabouts.

White later told her he used a razor blade to get free and managed to walk to the edge of the highway where he was picked up and taken to hospital.

The safety pin was removed and his wound was stitched up properly. When he was found, White told police to be on the lookout for a car heading south but the driver turned around and headed north to Jasper, Alta.

While riding with her kidnapper, Miss Vinqvist convinced him to let her use a gas station bathroom to brush her teeth and she wrote a note on paper towel with a pen from her purse.

She scrawled, "I'm being held kidnap by an ex-convict" and put down the licence plate number. When she saw the roadblock, she said she worried if the man would use her as hostage to escape, but he surrendered peacefully.

Even then, it was difficult at first to convince Edson, Alta. RCMP that her bizarre story was true, she said. Her captor told the police she was his niece.

Miss Vinqvist was asked point-blank if she would ever hitchhike again.

Sailor sold secrets, U.S. says

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A U.S. Navy yeoman working in the Pentagon was arrested Tuesday and charged him with espionage and stealing top-secret military documents, a U.S. justice department spokesman said.

The action against Lee Eugene Madsen is the first such charge against a member of the U.S. military in more than 10 years.

The other country or countries he allegedly sold the information to were not mentioned.

Madsen worked in the Pentagon's highly secret strategic warning staff.

Documents sold by the seaman included a Near East and South Asia Review, selected intelligence reports and a military weekly review, the department said.

Ed Isaac, manager of the city office of the Canadian Wheat Board, said only 30,000 tons of grain a day was moved in recent weeks, compared with an average of 40,000 tons a day in previous years.

Isaac said there are several ships about to go on demurrage — a form of penalty paid to the shipowners because of delays — at a cost to the wheat board of $5,000 a vessel each day.

"It's terribly frustrating," he said. "We are paying time-and-a-half to load ships at night — during the day they are sitting idle.

"We have got the grain cars, we have got the grain, but we can't get the guys to load it."

Pacific Elevators called for five longshore gangs Tuesday morning and got just one.

Gary Dewar, director of terminal facilities for Alberta Wheat Pool, said the situation has existed for two weeks.

"We can't get gangs to work days, yet there's plenty of longshoremen coming in on the premium shift," said Dewar. "We have never experienced this problem before, except at Christmas time.

Worst yachting disaster

on land, including an eight-year-old girl dragged out to sea by heavy surf.

The Fastnet race was limited to 57 craft, three each from 19 countries. Owners of other yachts had joined for the training or adventure.

The yachts had set out Saturday from the Isle of Wight, sailed west and rounded the Fastnet Rock jutting from the sea at the southern tip of Ireland.

The boats were strung along much of the course when the storm struck.

Among those reported safe was Britain's former prime minister Edward Heath, captain of the British team in the 970-kilometre Fastnet race. His boat Morning Cloud was towed toward Falmouth, England, with a broken rudder.

Peter Jay, former British ambassador to Washington who was not involved in the race, was rescued from his catamaran in the Irish Sea.

"It was frightening," said a crew member aboard another yacht towed into port. "We saw some yachts lying on their sides, others were stern up and some gone altogether."

Among the injured was Jim Kilroy of California, captain of the yacht Kialoa. Kilroy managed to sail into Plymouth unassisted. Officials said he suffered broken ribs.

One of the missing yachts was identified as the French-registered Trantulla, spotted from a helicopter foundering in heavy seas. A race official said the boat had not been spotted since.

The yachts were caught by the gale as they rounded Fastnet Rock off southern Ireland and headed back toward the English Channel. Ships in the area reported receiving numerous emergency Mayday radio calls.

"We sent out the Mayday signal, but the radio was very weak and we didn't know if anyone was hearing us," said David Bootham, a survivor from the British boat, Magic. "The seas were the worst I have ever been in. We were floating for 10 hours until we were rescued."

The crew of another British boat, the Camargue, was pushed into the ocean by Captain Arthur Moss, then hauled to safety by a helicopter equipped with a winch.

"The idea of jumping into those huge seas was appalling," said Frank Worley. "We were all pushed in one by one by the captain."

The three dead were plucked from the sea by a Dutch Navy vessel which joined in the big search and rescue operation in an area stretching from the coast of Cornwall to southern Ireland.

Rescue officials said the over-all situation is still far from clear. Some boats still in trouble were in remote areas. But it appeared that most of the yachts affected were small craft rather than the larger international entries in the Fastnet Race.

The Bermudan entry, Condor, beat the storm-lashed seas to win the 970-kilometre Fastnet race, knocking more than seven hours off the previous record.

The 25-metre craft arrived in Plymouth, completing the round sail from Cowes, near Plymouth, to the Fastnet Rock off Ireland and back in 71 hours, 30 minutes.

The previous record was set by American Eagle in 1971, covering the tough course in 79 hours, 11 minutes.

Condor's amazing time was due to the powerful winds which battered the smaller craft.

Well over 60 yachts are so far known to have pulled out of the race, the last event in the 19-country Admiral Cup competition.

Peter Blake, Condor's skipper, said: "The winds were so strong that you could not stand up on deck. You had to lie down and crawl along the deck to get anywhere."

"The conditions were as bad as anything I have seen in the roaring forties," the dreaded band between 40 and 50 degrees south latitude around the world, said Briton Robert James, a round-the-world sailor crewing on the Condor.

Britain's sea rescue facilities were stretched to the limit, and the commander of the Royal Air Force base at Culdrose appealed for crews to return from leave to spell the exhausted men on duty.

Sketchy early reports from the coast guard and Lloyds underwriters gave this picture:

The yacht Victory, nationality not reported: Crew abandoned vessel and boarded lifeboat.

Trophy, British: Sunk, one dead, body recovered, two rescued, five missing.

Ariadne, nationality not reported: Two dead on board Dutch destroyer Overijssel, two rescued on motor vessel Nanna, one rescued by helicopter, believed sunk.

Rain a teaser

The plane was still in Sproat Lake on Monday and the company's chief engineer was there to determine how it could be repaired, he said.

Pilot Allan Zanuzoski and crew member Nigel Penn were not injured in the forced landing.

The new small fires came just before a spotty rain began falling on southern B.C., the first in a 34-day drought which set the stage for one of the busiest forest fire seasons in the province in many years.

A spokesman for the weather office said the system could bring isolated showers heavy enough to dampen some of the 450 reported fires in B.C., but the system which scattered the rain also could cause lightening storms and trigger new fires.

And the showers weren't supposed to last long, the weather office said, and sunny periods were forecast for today.

The weather

Aug. 15, 1979

Mainly cloudy with a few showers. Winds brisk westerly. Tuesday's precipitation: trace. Sunshine 18 minutes. Recorded high and low at Victoria airport 18 and 14. Today's forecast high and low 20 and 12. Today's sunrise 6:06, sunset 8:29. Moonrise 12:21 a.m., moonset 3:15 p.m. Thursday outlook: decreasing cloud.

Deaths may reach 25,000

NEW DELHI (AP) — Search parties have recovered the bodies of 500 people drowned in the weekend collapse of an earthen and masonry dam near Morvi, on India's western coast. But there were reports that the toll might reach 25,000.

The Gujarat state government reacted to sharp criticism of its rescue operations by ordering a judicial inquiry into the disaster, believed the costliest in human lives since India's independence 32 years ago.

Officials in Morvi said at least 1,000 persons were killed, and other estimates ranged from 5,000 to 25,000.

Morvi was a ghost town Tuesday, littered with dead and covered in mud. Swarms of vultures wheeled overhead.

Officials said there would be no firm total on the number killed until the town and neighboring villages were cleared of mud, six metres deep in places.

By Tuesday, about 17,000 survivors were reported evacuated.

Mojahedeen guard their headquarters

Iranian leftists struggle for power, media

Moslems fight challenge

TEHRAN (AP) — Renewed clashes between leftists and Moslem extremists Tuesday pointed up an apparent attempt by powerful Islamic militants to stamp out a growing leftist challenge to their hold on Iran and the media.

A third consecutive day of sporadic violence indicated a widening split between factions that supported last February's Islamic revolution led by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

About 350 members of the leftist Fedayeen Khalq (People's) Organization marched through the city to their headquarters, which was taken over by revolutionary guards Monday. As the leftists chanted against the occupation, an anti-Fedayeen crowd attacked them with clubs and knives, Pars said.

Witnesses said the clashes were broken up by revolutionary guards who fired their automatic weapons into the air.

The Fedayeen headquarters was sacked Monday by 1,000 Moslem militants. Four Fedayeen were severely injured. Tons of leftist literature was thrown out of the building or burned in the streets before revolutionary guards moved in.

A sit-down in front of the Marxist-oriented Mojahedeen headquarters in another part of the city was peaceful but tense. Moslem militants brandishing clubs marched by, repeatedly threatening violence.

For the last two days, Moslem extremists carrying clubs and stones have been harassing the Mojahedeens outside their headquarters, chanting, "Communism is destroyed, Islam is victorious!"

Despite their religious orientation, the Mojahedeen seek to establish a classless society in Iran. The organization is believed behind much of the labor trouble that has paralysed Iranian industry for six months. Its goals are anathema to Khomeini and the conservative clerics who have so far dominated the Iranian revolution.

Interior Minister Hasham Sabaghian, quoted by state radio, said revolutionary guards had been authorized to stop demonstrations. The guards are the main force behind Khomeini, the 79-year-old spiritual leader who inspired the revolution that toppled the monarchy.

Meanwhile, the Islamic prosecutor in Tehran issued arrest warrants for a leading member of the leftist National Democratic Front and the editor of the newspaper Peghan Emruz.

Hedayatollah Matindaftari, a member of the NDF executive committee, was one of the organizers of a huge demonstration Sunday to protest the forced closing of the newspaper Ayandegan and a restrictive new press code. Moslem militants attacked the crowd of almost 100,000, injuring about 200 people, the NDF said.

Matindaftari is a grandson of Mohammad Mossadegh, the socialist prime minister who nationalized the Iranian oil industry in the early 1950s.

Indian president seeks national reconciliation

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — President Sanjiva Reddy called for a national reconciliation Tuesday, saying India was in a state of crisis.

"History will censure us if we do not act with foresight, goodwill and courage in this hour of national crisis," he said in a nationwide broadcast on the eve of India's 32nd anniversary of independence.

Reddy made indirect references to political turmoil and communal violence in India and said the time had come for a national reconciliation.

But with only six days before parliament reopens and Prime Minister Charan Singh seeks a vote of confidence, government and opposition parties remain bitterly opposed.

Singh took over last month after his supporters deserted the then ruling Janata Party, forcing Premier Morarji Desai to resign.

Reddy said he did not want to point an accusing finger at any political party. But he said morality and standards in public life were deteriorating, and added: "Never since independence have principles been so compromised and the basic values of life treated with such contempt."

Airlines fly unsafe planes over mechanics' protests

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Airline mechanics "each and every day see violations" of maintenance procedures but are asked by supervisors "to circumvent these procedures so that schedules can be met," a union official told a House of Representatives subcommittee Tuesday.

R. King McCulloch of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers said the Federal Aviation Administration seldom responded to mechanics' complaints about procedural short-cutting or dangerous conditions, choosing to refer them to the airlines.

"Before he (the complaining mechanic) turns around, the carrier is calling him into the office," McCulloch told the House government activities and transportation subcommittee, at hearings resulting from the crash of a DC-10 which killed 273 people near Chicago in May.

McCulloch charged that airline supervisors frequently "signed out" planes over the objections of mechanics.

He said one signed out a plane although two mechanics said a bolt in the thrust-reverse system was upside-down. The plane later made an emergency landing.

CORN COB SQUARE

WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) — Geneticist Walton Galinat has developed a square ear of sweet corn "so it won't roll off the plate."

He grew the ears after learning that airlines don't serve corn on the cob because it would roll off a plate.

His next project?

An ear of corn big enough for two to eat.

Doing what comes naturally

WHERE HAS Mark Rose been?

The New Democrat member of Parliament for Mission-Port Moody is complaining about the new Conservative government in Ottawa trying to manage the news.

Mr. Rose notes the government has awarded a $28 million advertising contract to a Toronto firm owned by Peter Swain whom he describes as the captain of the Tories' last election campaign. It is a blatant payoff and was awarded apparently without open competition, says Mr. Rose.

That is a charge the government should answer. But Mr. Rose doesn't stop there. He turns silly.

"...now they want to manage all the government news through a public relations firm that is owned by a party official," he says. "That's what is called news management. All the news released through the agency will be very one-sided, making the Conservatives look like they can do no wrong."

But we know better, don't we? So, not to worry, Mr. Rose.

Every government since Confederation has tried to "manage" the news, present it in a way which makes the government look good, or at least passable. That comes as naturally to politicians in power as breathing. So does the scepticism or downright disbelief with which government-generated news is greeted by the media and the public.

The Conserative government will undoubtedly present Mr. Rose with significant issues to debate and policies to criticize. His claim that they will manage the news isn't one of them.

Monstrous bores

THE TROUBLE with so many experts is that they are boring killjoys with not a trace of romance in their souls.

Not content with being merely boring, these much-too-clever chaps are forever trying to make life duller for the rest of us, by systematically destroying our cherished beliefs, illusions, legends and phenomena — everything from the Loch Ness Monster to Bigfoot and UFOs.

The latest member of this dreary tribe to air his explanations of the inexplicable is one Waldemar H. Lehn, associate professor of electrical engineering at the University of Manitoba.

Writing in the journal Science, Professor Lehn argues that most claimed sightings of lake monsters are nothing more than optical trickery caused by atmospheric conditions.

He says if the water temperature is much colder than the air above it, as is the case in several bodies of water where monsters have been sighted, the resulting "surface temperature inversions" produce extreme distortion of visual images.

The air just above the surface of the water bends light rays so that a stationary object such as a rock could be mistaken for a moving creature, Mr. Lehn says.

What a load of old cod's-wallop. Let's hope the next time this tedious fellow is testing out his optical illusion theory on Lake Okanagan, Ogopogo will pop up right alongside the boat and scare the pants off him.

COMMENT/BACKGROUND

Saigon today: S.E. Asia's Drabsville

Seymour M. Hersh
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Four years after the fall of Saigon, Ho Chi Minh City, renamed for the father of the Vietnamese revolution, has emerged as one of the black market capitals of Southeast Asia.

During a recent visit, it immediately became clear that the central government of Vietnam is unchallenged in its over-all control of the life of the city, whose pre-war population of 3.5 million was considered predominantly non-Communist or anti-Communist.

Virtually all of old Saigon's private shops and restaurants are shuttered, with only their fading and torn signs providing clues of the past. The night clubs and girlie bars are long gone. The modern air-conditioned office buildings that once housed United States and South Vietnamese military missions now serve as government offices. The well-appointed downtown hotels have been converted to far more drab guest houses run by the government for foreign visitors.

Ho Chi Minh City is not a happy place, as many Vietnamese officials reluctantly acknowledge. Hundreds of thousands have voluntarily fled the metropolis and the country, thousands more were forced to leave, and thousands more want to leave. One Western resident estimated the current population of Ho Chi Minh at slightly more than two million — one million less than official estimates — and said that half of those who remain want to leave.

Those who seem to be suffering the most under the new regime are those who did well when the United States was pouring in billions of dollars yearly in military and economic aid to South Vietnam. After the revolution in 1975, the shopkeepers, restaurateurs and traders found themselves without any means of support — except for government handouts of food.

To the peasants who fled to Saigon to escape the bombings and terror of the war in the countryside, the new Communist government seems far more welcome. It is that group — many of whom have been relocated to new economic zones and state farms in the countryside — on which Communist Vietnam is depending for the future.

The heavy emphasis on mass education and ending illiteracy — some 4 million could not read or write in the South in 1975 — has the added advantage for the government of serving as political re-education programs for youth.

But for those hundreds of thousands who were satisfied with the far easier life under the umbrella of American aid, Ho Chi Minh has become — as a Westerner put it — "Death City."

Unemployment, listed by city officials at only 200,000, seemed as if it might be far higher to a visitor, and some Westerners living here believe as many as 70 percent of the population do not have meaningful jobs.

For those who haven't left or can't leave, the resistance to the new government seems passive — and it is expressed most often in the free-wheeling black market that exists today in downtown Ho Chi Minh City.

Every morning, scores of Vietnamese men and women line up outside the Caravelle Hotel, renamed the Independence Hotel, to buy for dollars American cigarettes from those fortunate enough to receive them in the mail.

Cigarettes are far and away the most commonly peddled item on the black market. A visiting foreigner can purchase a package at a government-sanctioned exchange store for 80 cents, or roughly two dongs in local currency; on the black market, the cigarettes are worth as much as 35 dongs.

The basic staples of the flourishing black market are American dollars and gold, both of which are legal tender for those who wish to pay their way onto a boat and attempt to sail to freedom. The government is known to have been cracking down on such escapes — in part to fulfil a promise made at the recent International Conference on Refugees — but the citizens of Ho Chi Minh City still seem intent on collecting their dollars.

Western diplomats and United Nations officials who commute between Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City said one basic problem in Ho Chi Minh City was the fixed pay scale for all workers.

Salaries range from roughly 40 dongs for a typical government bureaucrat to 106 dongs for senior doctors in government sanitariums. One interpreter for a Western official living in Ho Chi Minh City, who holds the title of deputy director of his department, earns 70 dongs monthly.

"That's not even enough for his breakfast money," the Westerner said, referring to the skyrocketing inflation that has led to the doubling of some food prices in the past year.

The government does provide food benefits but those have been sharply reduced — from 17 kilograms of rice monthly to 13 kilograms for bureaucrats — because of Vietnam's decision to shift some food supplies to famine-stricken Cambodia.

Young children still can be found begging for food downtown, but they seem to be exceptions and not the rule. A few old men still sleep in doorways at night.

In the view of Western officials, Ho Chi Minh City will survive. But they believe the government must relax its strict rules on foreign investment and enable private companies to begin creating much-needed jobs at higher scales of pay.

"Quick — which way is Sweden?"

Noise drowns everything in weird world of disco

Edward Carrigan

TORONTO — Disco dancing has established beyond any reasoned possibility of doubt that human beings can be in a catatonic state and sustain physical movement at the same time. This finding disproves years of exhaustive physiological research. The disco dancers with expressionless faces and uncomprehending eyes achieve in an instant the effect which generations of film make-up artists have been striving for in horror films.

The scientific community for years was skeptical about reports of perambulatory victims of catatonia but observing a crowd of disco dancers will convince any objective person that this specific group of human beings, in its diversions, has attained the scientifically implausible, and physically improbable.

Disco dancing parlors are where those who dislike dancing go to meet those who dislike music. They are places where noise saturates the environment drowning out activities of social contact, such as conversation, thinking, reading and relaxation. Communication is limited to primordial grunts, and elementary sign language. Subtlety of discourse is discouraged and the volume of sound is too great to permit the establishment of any real emotional contact.

The quantity of sound reverberating through disco dancing parlors makes it possible for sound to be felt, like a malign wind ricocheting through the atmosphere, often with the impact of a fist in the abdomen. This noise, which sounds like an artillery barrage heard at close range, induces miscellaneous physical symptoms in people within a short distance of it, such as ear discharge, watering of the eyes and trembling of the hands. If almost all disco dancers seem slack-jawed, vacant-eyed and jerky in movement it is because they are suffering the incipient symptoms of aural shock.

Disco dancing is sophistication for the functionally illiterate and culturally deprived. Disco dancers cultivate the kind of hauteur associated with bad Hollywood films about the rich and powerful disporting themselves in nightclubs and exclusive restaurants. They have all but resurrected long cigarette holders, strapless evening gowns and orchids for the ladies.

Disco dancers are nostalgic for decadence the way hippies of the 1960s professed being nostalgic for agrarian innocence. They look to Neol Coward for moral guidance and to the Aga Khan for social inspiration. If they cast their thoughts beyond immediate pleasures, they would see themselves as the natural constituency of Metternich in international politics and leaders like Herbert Hoover in domestic economics. They are the children William Buckley wished he had had.

The customers of disco dancing establishments do not represent the raw material out of which great movement of political or religious reformation can be fashioned. When the revolutionaries storm the barricades, the disco customers will be on the other side making sardonic remarks about the clothes of the insurgents, and lending lethargic encouragement to the forces of order.

The Twist of the 1960s left its practitioners looking like a German infantry column trying to goose-step sideways. Disco dancers look like so many mating birds of paradise engaging in some form of ungainly mating dance on the spot.

Disco dancers are caught up in a frenzy of ostentation. Their clothes are designed to startle and their hair styles to dazzle. They preen themselves on their dress, which evidently is something on which they lavish inordinate care and improbable sums of money. To be a successful disco dancer is to be absolutely in love with one's persona, body and physical movements. It is self-infatuation which passes all understanding.

Disco dancers seldom indulge themselves in bits of conversation, smiles or eye contact. They are too busy watching parts of their anatomy function, gazing upon themselves with that silent rapture which only the truly narcissistic can have for themselves. Their glances to other disco dancers are invitations to admire them.

Disco dancers are solemn in the pursuit of their amusements. Their demeanor is rarely lightened by levity, horseplay or sardonic humor at their own expense. They preserve the facial rigidity of choir-boys and the dedication to their pastime of religious converts.

Mrs. Thatcher's mistake on Rhodesia appeasement

Lubor Zink

OTTAWA — Sad to say, Britain's "Iron Lady," Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, has flunked her first major international test. Instead of presenting and defending in Lusaka her case for lifting sanctions against Rhodesia and recognition of the elected Muzorewa transition government — the only course that might still prevent repetition of the Indochina tragedy in southern Africa — Mrs. Thatcher took the momentarily easier road of appeasement of the Afro-Asian-Caribbean bloc of the Commonwealth.

Appeasement never worked before and does not have a ghost of a chance in Rhodesia either. Why? Because in this totalitarian century users of political violence do not seek, and are not interested in, negotiated give-and-take settlements. What they are after — from Hitler to Stalin to Brezhnev to Castro to all the Nkomos and Mugabes — is imposition of their own terms. And since their terms are monopoly of power which does not tolerate any opposition or alternative, such non-negotiable terms can only be imposed, as "liberation movement" strategist Mao Tse-tung used to say, through the barrel of the gun.

The pattern, no matter where the "liberation struggle" is taking place — Vietnam, Ethiopia, Ulster, Afghanistan, Iran, Rhodesia — is always the same. Political terrorism (of which we had a taste in Quebec, so put the lib-left notion of intolerable injustice as its cause to rest) escalates into a guerrilla war. This happens invariably with outside help in arms, training and ideological direction. An indispensable condition is a willing and safe sanctuary for the guerrillas in at least one neighboring country. (We were lucky that our political terrorists found no such haven across the border).

Once the guerrilla war stage is reached and its joint Marxist and lib-left sponsorship firmly established, a total power grab by the "liberators" is merely a matter of time. The combination of savagery from their sheltered bases and skilful world-wide propaganda wears down any and all defences. Attempts to negotiate some compromise settlement, as Kissinger's "peace with honor" in Vietnam has amply demonstrated, merely serve to confuse the issues and undermine remaining resistance.

Even though guerrilla bases have existed in the so-called "frontline states" for years, Rhodesia's case is somewhat exceptional in the sense that Britain has remained ultimately responsible for the former self-governing colony's transition to full independence. Moreover, political changes inside Rhodesia since the one-man-one-vote election last April have to a large extent met the conditions Britain stipulated for "legal" independence.

Before going to Lusaka, Prime Minister Thatcher indicated that the changes which had taken place, though requiring modifications, warranted lifting of sanctions and recognition of Bishop Muzorewa's elected black majority government. Nothing happened in Rhodesia during the Commonwealth Conference to alter the picture. What, then, compelled Mrs. Thatcher to change her attitude, if perhaps not her mind?

It seems she didn't expect a complete Commonwealth gangup on her. She may have counted on some support from the Conservative administration in Australia and from the new Tory government in Canada. When she found herself isolated, attacked by the Zambian host of the meeting (the Commonwealth "frontliners" had a pre-conference session with their Marxist neighbors on how to put the squeeze on Mrs. Thatcher) and blackmailed by Nigeria, the "Iron Lady" caved in to pressure and threats.

Her new constitution and new election formula the conference agreed on offends Muzorewa but does not go far enough the peace-at-any-price way to satisfy the "Patriotic Front." Its manipulators are determined to boycott a British-supervised election just as they boycotted the April vote, for the simple reason that any free and fair election would reveal how little popular support they really have.

Their claim to be the sole legitimate representatives of the people they try to terrorize into Marxist-style "liberation" would be shattered. So, like their SWAPO comrades, the "Patriotic Front" terrorists want a UN-supervised election. Why? Because the UN Afro-Asian-Communist Bloc majority can be counted on to select for supervision of the election such champions of the democratic process as Ethiopia, Panama, one of the Soviet satellites, Iran or Afghanistan, and of course the "frontline states." If Mrs. Thatcher's formula manages to force at least this "liberation" trick to public attention, her cave-in in Lusaka need not be a total loss.

The latest one you're going to hear a lot about was offered by an administration official as a solution to the energy crisis. He said Americans must learn to "maximize personal discomfort."

How are we going to "maximize personal discomfort," you ask? By lowering temperature settings, forming car pools and riding buses.

How do you like that? For years, I've been "maximizing my personal discomfort" via a car pool. I just didn't know what you called it.

Ironically, the first car pool had nothing to do with conservation or with the shortage of gas. Shared rides were invented by Thelma Flagstop, an Indiana housewife, who in 1933 volunteered to pick up four youngsters to take them to a birthday party. She made arrangements for another mother to pick them up.

Despite the fact that two of the children lived within two doors of the party, the idea caught on like wildfire. Children didn't want to walk any more. They liked the idea of climbing into a car and going bye-bye, playing with the windows, and jumping up and down on the seats.

The rest is history. In 1978, there were six billion, 973,235 car pools in the United States — all manned by mothers. You may remember the blizzard of '79 in Chicago where there were only two cars on the road: a snow plow and a mother carrying five little girls to baton lessons.

Car-pooling may soon become a new way of life in this country. It would be selfish of me not to share my expertise with those soon to embark on the car pool experience.

1. The chili rule. No chili will be eaten off the dashboard before 10:30 a.m.

2. Riders must know where they live. If not, they must have directions pinned to their sweater.

3. Occupancy by more than eight in the back seat is not permitted.

4. If a passenger announces, "I don't feel so good," take him seriously. I always familiarize my passengers with the nausea drill on the first day so they may go directly to the nearest exit with precision.

Follow these rules and you will not only minimize joy, but your level of frustration will polarize. I wouldn't have said it quite that way . . . but the government would.

one man's opinion

I have been challenged by the military establishment to show cause why said military establishment should not be given a most complete overhaul and a facelift that would make it almost unrecognizable in relation to today's armed service.

Gordon M. Churchill is a most distinguished Canadian now living in retirement in our city. In his case, most distinguished is not overused. He has been a teacher, lawyer, serviceman, elected Member of Parliament and cabinet minister. In a recent letter to the editor of this paper and in answer to my column on disarmament, Churchill says that pacifism is the road to slavery and a policy of despair in international affairs.

"A preponderance of military power is the only way by which peace and freedom may be assured," Churchill writes, "everything else has been tried over the centuries and has failed."

Churchill points out and probably with a good deal of truth, that we have been saved from world conflict simply because of the military alliance of NATO and by the balance of nuclear terror.

He also argues that Canada's record in two previous world wars was beyond reproach, which, has never been cause for argument. In fact, I can find no basis for serious altercation with any of Churchill's statements — except, that they do not apply to Canada in today's world.

WE HAVE BEEN ABLE to play our part with admirable glory in past conflicts. We have never been found wanting by friend or foe and I'm sure that if asked to man the breaches again, Canada would be among the first off the mark.

This was not my argument. My argument runs to the monstrous stupidity with which we approach the problem today. We are trying to be a military power without benefit of (a) manpower and (b) money. We are — and this is my major complaint — spending untold millions on the hardware of war, while that hardware is, to all intents and purposes, completely obsolete. We have, in the past, been guilty of buying Leopard tanks from the Germans when Leopard tanks were being junked by other nations.

Right now, our very own Allan McKinnon, just a month into the seat of power, is anxiously waiting to spend about a BILLION dollars on one of two U.S. fighter planes to replace our F-104 Voodoos. He is also deep into negotiations with the second-hand marketeers (in this case, Iran,) for the purchase of F-14 Tomcat supersonic fighter planes, at a price still under strong haggle.

Now this IS my argument. It is an outrageous folly, an obscene waste of our tax dollars. We do not need such war planes. We are but playing toy soldier. By all means let our air arm have planes that can be used for rescue missions, for the water bombing of forest fires, for countless necessary and PEACEFUL purposes. I will assume such planes can be bought for many millions less than we are presently willing to throw away on macho machines that do nothing but spew death.

SAME ARGUMENT holds water for the naval arm. Buy the ships necessary for peaceful purposes, but scrapyard all those of military design. They are a joke anyway in that they would be completely passe if somebody decided to press the nuclear button. Throw out the silly tanks, gun carriers, etc. Replace them with instruments of peace for industrial gain.

Change the face of our armed forces like it has never been changed before. You realize, of course, that it has never been changed — merely updated down through the years.

This new government could make changes that would allow the armed services to perform a worthwhile role — something they do not perform at this time. McKinnon, as the minister responsible, could make it into the national guard sort of force I alluded to in my "pacifist" column of recent date. It would certainly cost us less and would certainly be of far greater value for money spent.

Yes, by all means, use it as a compulsory training ground for our young people as well. No reason whatsoever that all our physically fit high school graduates should not be conscripted into such a national guard for one year's service. Would do many of them a whole lot of good and might make the country a better place in which to live in the future.

Whatever, Mr. McKinnon, let us do something other than pay the same old lip service to the same old wasteful military establishment. I think maybe Ottawa is about ripe for a few original ideas instead of the veneration of sycophantic drabness that has underwhelmed the military as long as anyone can remember.

Advice avoided

In the Aug. 11 Colonist you have the good doctor, who writes Your Good Health advice, advising the woman suffering from "weaver's bottom" to "void sitting on hard surfaces." I do hope this was a printer's error and not the doctor's cure for "weaver's bottom."

Good old days

It would seem that your court reporter has heeded the slogan 'Think Metric' (or perhaps 'Rethink' would be more appropriate). In the Aug. 9 Colonist he reports that two offending fishing vessels were, respectively, 1200 and 600 kilometres inside Canadian waters; today, in other cases, the distances are given as 650, 2800 and 800 metres respectively.

Incidentally, in all cases the weights of the confiscated catches is given in pounds — not grams, or, perhaps, litres.

In view of the immense expenditure which has been incurred in converting the marketplace to the metric system, it is perhaps too much to hope that our present government will be able to dispense entirely with this metric nonsense.

However, in the matter of distance measurements, surely it is not too late to revert to traditional mileage, along with legible road signs (in the language common to the locality) in place of the cryptic pictograms now in vogue?

Excuse our slip. We meant metres, of course. It's times like these which make the good old days seem so good, isn't it?

Refugees needed for skills, ideas

Congratulations for publishing the letter from Mr. Albee. I wondered at the time why you would publish such an "Archie Bunker" diatribe (by no means as funny as Archie).

The responses you have since published have been reassuring including Tom Waterland's letter (Aug.8). The writers express mainly compassion for the Vietnamese refugees but I have a more pragmatic view.

I find myself drawing parallels between our situation in the world and that of the French aristocrats before the French revolution. One wonders on review of their history how, even with their great estates and retainers, they could have been so impervious to the wants and needs of the rest of the surrounding society had to the kind of organization which it breeds to bring about their downfall.

Perhaps this applies to some of the Viets. No armed defences a nation is capable of will stop the overthrow of a small group of 'haves' by the have nots.

Canada is a country huge in terms of land and water resources heading toward zero population growth due to our philosophy of self development at the cost of future growth and new development.

We have no choice (if not the generosity of spirit and good heart) but to offer refuge to the refugees of any culture trying to escape the devastation of takeover by a totalitarian regime. We also need to broaden not lessen our immigration policy while we can still control the influx of other cultures to Canada.

So our defence as a nation great in the 'haves' of this world as compared to the many overcrowded, underdeveloped but even more aware 'have not' cultures is to foster immigration. We need them for their skills and ideas and their desperate need to have a safe place to adjust and redevelop. We need them because they are willing to have children and pass on their knowledge — our country has an unemployment problem due as much to failure to pass on working skills as to lack of industrial growth.

We also, need them too because we need competition on a civilized basis. Sure, we can expect many squabbles between groups of different cultures but, by second and third generations a common bond will have developed, and that's the bond that provides the protection we need as a nation.

Nuclear moratorium gives us valuable time

Today, 500 delegates involved with nuclear technology will arrive in Nanaimo.

It is my belief that these delegates should accept the responsibility for the work they are involved with. The issue of nuclear power has many sides and encompasses many unanswered questions. Just what is our rush? If we choose nuclear power our path is set for the next quarter million years. Surely a nuclear moratorium would give us time to assess our needs, our objectives, our futures . . . so why then can we not pause and reflect?

Nuclear waste disposal, increasing cancer rate, genetic malformations, terrorism, human and mechanical failure — can we afford not to take the time to reflect upon a decision which will affect the next several hundred thousand years?

The delegates represent many interests of government and industry in this nation and on this planet. All of these people must be made to recognize the rights of the individual citizen to play a part in a decision of this magnitude. We need freedom of information legislation and open debate on this subject in order that we may weigh the consequences before we're irreparably committed.

The people with the power will listen if enough voices come forth with their concerns.

Poison doesn't mean pain, it's trip into happy land

Wasn't it nice of Rafe Mair, the man we employ to look after our environment, to write that long letter explaining why they must use that scientific poison on our coyotes and wolves?

I was so thankful to know how painless it is, that all that foaming at the mouth and howling and lashing about in convulsions doesn't mean that they are in pain, they're only on one of those drug trips into happy land.

I surely do wish Mr. Mair had been around when the Spanish Inquisition was at work and he could have made people realize that all that groaning and stretching on the rack was only a sympton of ecstasy and the writhing in the flames as a sign of holy joy.

It really is encouraging to see such a selfless man as Mr. Mair standing up for the principles of his office. It didn't matter to him that the cattle ranchers elected him, he just made them wait a whole two months before he let them go ahead with their poison.

After all, the ranchers absolutely proved that a wolf killed a calf last year and ate it. And I just don't pay any attention to those who say that's what the ranchers were going to do to it. They wouldn't eat it, they'd sell it and that's different, isn't it? Just because they could only prove one was killed, doesn't mean there wasn't lots more, does it?

This is so much surer and kinder, and cheaper, than shooting wolves from airplanes, although the airplanes were really more sporting. All the wolves and coyotes had to do was to outrun the airplane and dodge the sportsman with the gun. That way he had a chance, didn't he?

Gosh, I wish I was as wise and kindly as Mr. Mair and his associates. If I could only be that certain of being right. You see, I love this country and I'm proud to be Canadian but I don't sleep too well when I think of defenceless wild creatures writhing in convulsions from the carefully administered Mair medicine. What price Guyana?

Degree-granting powers discredits B.C. standards

The Confederation of University Faculty Associations of British Columbia, representing university faculty members in this province, wishes publicly to record its dismay at the procedure followed by the Legislative Assembly in giving degree-granting powers to Trinity Western College, Langley.

We do not intend to express any opposition to Trinity Western College. We wish to address ourselves to the procedure which the government has permitted in this case, a procedure that will discredit British Columbia before the international academic community.

Possession of a university degree from British Columbia should always mean that one's university has satisfied rigorous public scrutiny as to its academic standards and objectives. It is all too easy to devalue the currency by allowing a proliferation of institutions licensed to grant degrees.

Section 82 of the Universities Act of British Columbia seeks to guard against any such erosion of academic qualifications by stating: "No person shall in the province hold itself out or be known as a university, or grant degrees in its own name except in accordance with powers granted under this act."

The members who voted for the passage of the recent private member's bill chose, cavalierly, to brush aside this requirement. The government did not even consider it necessary to reconcile these two conflicting pieces of legislation. Section 82 of the Universities Act might as well not exist.

Such procedures expose the province to ridicule. A British Columbia institution may now grant degrees after only the most cursory examination by the Select Standing Committee on Standing Orders and Private Bills. This power moreover, has been given in the teeth of public objections by members of the Universities Council, the body empowered by the Universities Act to advise the government respecting the establishment of new universities and to approve the establishment of new degree programs.

It is hardly a service to Trinity Western College or its students to give legislative sanction to the awarding of degrees in a manner that will lead to those degrees being called into question. It is not the degrees of Trinity Western College alone, however, that will suffer. British Columbian qualifications in general stand to be discredited by this procedure.

Toronto trading

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market fought off an early wave of profit-taking Tuesday to achieve its fifth consecutive gain.

Continued strength at New York was a positive influence and analysts noted increased buying by institutions.

Part of the increased volume was due to the sale of 750,000 shares of Parlake Resources Ltd. in a fixed-price offering before the opening at $1.90 a share. Parlake Resources closed up 13 cents to $2.38.

Trading in shares of Sullivan Mining Group Ltd. and East Sullivan Mines Ltd. was halted at mid-day but is scheduled to resume at the opening today. Sullivan Mining Group A last traded at $3.35 and East Sullivan A at $3.20.

Ottawa goes to bat for ailing Chrysler

OTTAWA (CP) — Economic Development Minister Bob de Cotret said Tuesday the financial problems of Chrysler Canada Ltd. are unique and merit urgent attention from the federal government.

"We are certainly prepared to assist (the company) in any way considered acceptable to the federal government" he told reporters after a cabinet meeting here.

He would not be more specific.

But de Cotret also said he will meet officials from the company's Canadian headquarters in Windsor, Ont., in a few days to discuss some confidential proposals they made to him and Michael Wilson, minister of state for international trade.

"The proposals were very interesting," he said. "They're under wraps. Let me leave it at that."

Chrysler lost $31 million here last year but still retains an 18-per-cent-share of the automobile market. Its parent corporation in the United States has fared even worse.

Chrysler Corp. is reeling from $260.9 million in losses for the first six months of the year and has only a 10 per cent share of the huge U.S. market.

The Detroit auto maker has asked the U.S. government for $1 billion in cash advances to stave off financial collapse.

GM lends hand

DETROIT (AP) — The loan division of General Motors agreed Tuesday to help shore up its counterpart at Chrysler Corp. with financing for the new car inventories of dealers.

General Motors Acceptance Corp., the largest finance company in the United States, said it will buy from Chrysler Financial Corp. wholesale receivables — amounts of money owed to the company. The receivables will be bought monthly through January in transactions that will net Chrysler Financial $230 million, GM said.

For Chrysler Financial, almost cut off from its usual sources of money because of its parent company's shaky finances, it was the second such deal in less than a week.

On Friday, Household Finance Corp. agreed to buy $500 million in receivables, $300 million next Tuesday and $200 million in September.

It is the second time GM has come to Chrysler's aid. GM engineers already are helping Chrysler on emissions and passive restraint work.

Sales off

DETROIT (AP) — Sales of U.S. auto producers fell 18 per cent in the first 10 days of August compared with record sales in the same period last year, company reports show.

It is the first reporting period since Chrysler Corp. announced its application for $1 billion in U.S. government aid. Sales of Chrysler domestic lines were off 38 per cent.

General Motors Corp. sales dropped 16 per cent, from 145,744 cars to 122,548, and Ford Motor Co. sales fell 18 per cent from 56,000 to 45,832.

Ben's shares hard to find

EDMONTON (CP) — Only about one-third of the free shares offered Albertans by Uncle Ben's brewery in Red Deer 18 months ago have been delivered but all may be worthless, says brewery owner Ben Ginter.

Ginter's financially-troubled brewery has been listed for sale nationally since Aug. 1 for $12 million and could be sold before all the shares can be delivered to the 30,000 people who ordered them.

"The shareholders will lose their deal along with me," said Ginter in a telephone interview Monday from his Vancouver office.

"I'm leaving the brewery business."

The 56-year-old Ginter has owned four breweries and once before, in October, 1976, vowed to sell out his Red Deer business. But he changed his mind and personally took the brewery out of receivership in January, 1978.

Free shares in return for bottle caps were then promised as a publicity ploy to boost declining sales. Distribution of the shares, which had to be registered with the Alberta Securities Commission, began in June. They are trickling to Albertans at the rate of 100 a day.

French keep tucking away their gold Napoleons

PARIS (AP) — A new gold rush is on in France, reflecting growing uneasiness over the Western economy in general and inflation and paper money in particular.

In a country where gold hoarding is a tradition, the 20-franc Napoleon gold coin set a record Monday when it was quoted at 404 francs, a rise of more than 50 per cent since the beginning of the year. It was at 400 francs Friday.

At its new price, the Napoleon, with a gold content of 5.8 grams, carries a premium of about 60 per cent over its intrinsic gold value. At Monday's exchange rate, 20 francs converts to $4.71 U.S. The 404-franc sale price of the coin converts to $95.28 U.S. Four thousand of the old coins were exchanged on the open market Monday.

On foreign exchanges, gold prices hit a record high $307.375 an ounce July 24, then sank below $282 before bouncing back above $300 last week. The price was up to $303.50 an ounce in London early Monday, then dropped to $295.75 on Tuesday.

About 173 Napoleon coins can be produced from one kilo, or 2.2 pounds, of pure gold. This means that measured by the current value of the Napoleon coin, the one-kilo ingot would be worth $16,459 (69,890 francs), compared with $10,291 (43,700 francs) quoted Monday on the open gold market.

Napoleon coins, which were minted mostly in the 19th century, generally are bought by small investors and hoarders who cannot afford to buy kilo-ingots. They also are more easily exchanged. Gold hoarding still is seen in France as the best refuge against monetary, economic and political upheavals.

It is conservatively estimated that French private hoarders own at least 6,000 tons of gold, more than private individuals of any other country except, perhaps, India.

It is twice the amount held by the French Central Bank, whose gold reserves stood at 3,172 tons at the beginning of this year.

Napoleon coins first were minted in 1792, but most of those are in the hands collectors. The 20-franc Napoleons that are being traded feverishly today were first minted in 1803, and intermittently up to 1914.

CHERRIES ARE GONE

AUTOMOBILE NEWS & VIEWS
By Bill Vance

"All the cherries are off the bottom of the tree", we were told.

The occasion was Chrysler's recent press preview of its 1980 cars at their proving ground in Chelsea, Mich. The speaker was a senior engineer making the point that the relatively easy advances in fuel economy have been made. From now on it's improving economy by getting the weight out "pound by pound" (they're not metricized yet in the U.S.0 and adding miles per gallon "tenth by tenth".

So the motor companies talk of such savings as 0.5 to one per cent from reduced engine idle speeds, one per cent from a viscous drive fan or two to three per cent from a lock-up torque converter. General Motors claims that it gains 0.3 mpg on its new X-cars by using a redesigned brake caliper that lowers drag slightly.

So as we gradually move toward the mandated 1985 target of 8.5 L/100 km (53 km/g; 27.5 mp U.S.g) corporate average fuel economy, the "cherries" are indeed getting harder to find. And in spite of U.S. Secretary of Transportation calling for the industry to reinvent the auto, a recent study conducted by the Arthur D. Little Co. of Cambridge, Massachusetts, and reported in Automotive News, indicates that the process will be evolutionary rather than revolutionary.

The two-year study dealing with the predicted directions of automotive design over the next decade suggests that these are the things we can expect:

● Diesel engines will see wider use if not legislated out of cars by exhaust emission laws. Diesels use up to 30 per cent less fuel than gasoline engines of similar size.

● More turbochargers — small exhaust-driven compressors that give more power on demand while weighing very little and using little extra fuel when not being called upon for more power. Ford, Saab, Porsche, Mercedes-Benz and Buick already have them. They make a six-cylinder engine act like an eight, or a diesel perform as though it were gasoline fired.

● Four-speed automatic transmission. Not new to the imports as Toyota and Mercedes-Benz have it now. Look for it from Ford for 1980. Also, continuously variable transmissions with ratios controlled by an on-board mini-computer.

● New materials such as aluminum, plastics and lightweight high-strength steel alloys.

The study also concluded that consumers don't show much concern about $1-per-gallon gasoline, but that there is a real worry over being able to get enough (that has certainly been proved true lately!). At $1.50 per gallon, the little study sees motorists becoming worried over price.

So there are some prognostications for the next 10 years of the car scene. It's not a definitive list by any means. For example, there was no mention of aerodynamics, which could be seen as becoming increasingly important. Electronics weren't stressed either, and it won't be long until all cars will have an on-board computer controlling all sorts of things that we haven't even thought of yet.

Air Canada plans short-trip fare cut

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada plans to offer reduced fares on flights shorter than 1,600 kilometres, similar to the sale it is now promoting for longer North American flights.

Guy Chiasson, vice-president for passenger planning and marketing, said Tuesday that the plan would be introduced in early September and would be kept separate from the fall "seat sale" on longer-distance flights.

He said it was too early to say how many seats or what discounts would be offered.

Some 350,000 seats have been set aside on long-distance flights from Sept. 24 to Nov. 4 at reductions of 46 to 66 per cent.

"In our spring sale, we had such an overwhelming response that we had problems answering telephones," Chiasson said.

"This time, we have asked people who want to travel at discount fares to call at off-peak hours, on nights or weekends, when we aren't so busy, and most people have been quite co-operative."

"This time the response hasn't been quite as great, but we expected that because spring demand is traditionally higher than fall demand."

Chiasson said 59 per cent of reduced-fare trans-Canada seats were sold in the first 15 days.

Crosbie
. . . cites gloom

No shredding found

OTTAWA (CP) — Investigations by cabinet ministers have turned up no evidence that public servants shredded documents before the Conservative government took office after the May 22 election, a spokesman for Solicitor-General Allan Lawrence said Tuesday.

"As far as the departments are concerned, nothing untoward took place," Bill McGuffin said. "Of course, what went on in the ministers' offices was another matter."

It is usual for ministers to remove or destroy personal files when they leave office, but Conservative MP Tom Cossitt said a few days after the election that public servants were also working overtime to shred "incriminating" files.

July unemployment down to 7.2 per cent

Good news won't last

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Crosbie said Tuesday he saw little hope of keeping the unemployment rate down to its July level of 7.2 per cent much longer.

The minister said it was good news that latest unemployment figures showed the number of unsuccessful job seekers dropped in July to a nine-month low of 793,000.

But Crosbie doubted the improvement could be sustained in the face of bleak economic forecasts.

Signs of trouble were already apparent in July's figures. Windsor, home of Chrysler Canada Ltd., reported unemployment of 12.8 per cent, more than five per cent higher than the national average.

Chrysler has laid off 750 workers so far, and warned both the provincial and federal governments that many more may lose their jobs unless the company gets government help to redesign its plants to produce smaller, more fuel-efficient vehicles.

The Conference Board in Canada has predicted a year-end unemployment rate of 7.9 per cent and the government's own figures indicate the 1979 average will be in the neighborhood of eight per cent.

Liberal finance critic Herb Gray, who represents the hard-hit riding of Windsor West, called Tuesday's job figures heartening. But like Crosbie, he expects the employment situation to deteriorate in the months ahead.

He has written to Industry Minister Robert de Cotret urging that the government meet with Chrysler officials to determine practical ways to use federal funds to help the company through the hard times ahead.

Gray said the encouraging July unemployment figures could be seen partly as a reflection of policies left in place by the Liberal government, defeated at the polls May 22.

He said the Conservatives should call back Parliament earlier than their announced October resumption date to introduce new economic policies.

Speaking for the New Democratic Party, Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam) called the July drop in unemployment gratifying but "very temporary."

Cowichan still not exclusive

Indians win concession in name fight

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Cowichan Indian band has won a concession in its battle with a private company over exclusive rights to the Cowichan name, but the battle continues.

Yarn Barn, a company which uses the trade mark Cowichan to sell wool, has agreed to recognize the Indians as proper holders of the name, but only for sweaters, not wool, says Leslie Pinder, lawyer for the Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs, which is backing the band in the name issue.

The Indians had asked Yarn Barn to stop using the Cowichan trade mark for wool it imported from New Zealand. They said the company's use of the Cowichan name for machine-spun yarn was misleading and confusing for consumers.

But, despite the Indians' pleas, the company will continue to sell wool under the Cowichan label.

Pinder said Tuesday the dispute was nowhere near settlement and she thought the Indians would have to start court action to solve the name problem.

Yarn Barn chairman Frank Bush said, however, that his company did not want to get into a "contentious situation."

After a meeting with representatives from the band and the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, he said he thought the problem had been solved to the mutual satisfaction of both parties.

Pinder said the band's main concern was still that the exclusive right to use the Cowichan name was not with the Indian people who were knitting and marketing sweaters.

"(Bush) is pretending to be very virtuous and on the side of the Indians when it's really a very inconsistent position," she said.

The band's second concern was that the Yarn Barn wool was of lower quality than yarn used in genuine Cowichan sweaters, Pinder said. The New Zealand wool was machine-spun instead of hand-spun.

Bush said his company deplored the use of the Cowichan name on inferior-quality sweaters produced for tourists by non-Indians from machine-spun wool.

"We felt the Indians were justified in their complaint about hand-knit sweaters being passed off as genuine Cowichan sweaters," he said. "It irritated us, too."

Bush said Yarn Barn never authorized application for the Cowichan name to be used on sweaters. He said the company wanted a trade mark for wool only, but the patent attorney had included a blanket registration for all potential uses of the company's wool, including sweaters.

PAIR HONORED

Rebekah Stewart and Adriana Wong have been awarded scholarships for academic excellence by Norfolk House School.

Both are students at the school and will be entering Grade 10 in September.

The scholarships, valued at $250 each and renewable after one year, are the result of a new and extended scholarship program by the school.

LOADS JUMP 22% ON MARGUERITE

The Princess Marguerite is continuing to break her own passenger-carrying records, with 87,154 visitors carried in the month of July.

Tourism Minister Donald Phillips announced Tuesday that the Marguerite had carried 22.8 per cent more passengers in July on the Victoria-Seattle run than she carried in the same month last year.

The percentage increase wasn't quite as high as in June when the vessel carried 30.4 per cent more passengers than in June of 1978.

In July, the Marguerite brought 44,298 passengers to Victoria and carried 42,856 from Victoria to Seattle.

Town faces charges

PORT HARDY—Twelve charges under the federal Fisheries Act facing the town are scheduled to be heard Oct. 17.

The town faces six counts each of depositing, and allowing to be deposited, silt in a fish-bearing stream.

The charges were laid after alleged incidents on the Trustee River drainage when a municipally-hired contractor was working on land developments.

The charges were recently remanded without plea to the October date.

Council has apparently not decided whether to fight the charges and the remand is the second in the case.

Meanwhile, the town has lost a lease on the government wharf next to the Seagate Hotel.

The lease required the town to pay a rental of $1 a year in addition to 15 per cent of all fees collected to the federal government.

The rental fee was not paid for the past two years, but the 15 per cent commission was forwarded on a regular basis, the mayor said.

However, it was sent to the wrong government department.

There was also some doubt about the date the warning letter was received from the federal government.

Council voted to ask the federal government to reconsider cancelling the lease arrangement.

Man killed in car crash

NORDEGG, Alta.—A 20-year-old Coquitlam man, John Graham, was killed Monday night in a single-vehicle accident on a forestry road about 32 kilometres north of this community, 150 kilometres west of Red Deer.

Police said the car in which Graham was a passenger went out of control on a sharp corner.

Garbage bylaw 'unfair'

Further details were obtained Tuesday on the B.C. Supreme Court judgment which relegated the city of Victoria's garbage disposal bylaw to the trash can.

Mr. Justice Lloyd McKenzie of the B.C. Supreme Court quashed the bylaw as unreasonable and unfair because it created a class of property occupiers who were denied the fee-free garbage collection service.

The action was started by Elsie Wedman, a Victoria apartment owner who said the bylaw should be quashed because it discriminated against apartment owners and occupiers.

The bylaw entitled the occupier of each parcel of land in the city to free removal 50 time a year of the contents of two garbage cans. The occupants of a single dwelling or the owner of an apartment building would be entitled to free service, while tenants in the apartment building would not.

The judge said, however, each owner of a condominium, because he owns a strata lot, qualified as the occupier of a parcel of land and the free service.

He said there is no question that a double standard existed and the only excuse for it was a commercial one, because the annual cost of free garbage collection from Victoria's 22,561 apartment units, at the rate of one can each a week, would be $679,507.

"It is quite apparent that the city of Victoria finds it convenient to include in its budget an amount which must be raised by municipal taxes to fund the cost of collecting garbage from property owners, i.e. municipal taxpayers.

"It then offers 'free' removal of the two cans from the premises of each property owner."

He said that since the apartment dweller does not pay municipal taxes he must pay for his garbage removals on the fee scale stipulated by the bylaw.

The judge said the city was empowered under the Municipal Act to establish a scale of charges payable to owners or occupiers, but took the "or" at face value and defined occupiers so as to give the word a different meaning which applied to property owners and property tenants.

Conquer Cancer drive goes well over the top

The 1979 Conquer Cancer campaign for Greater Victoria has for the first time surpassed its fund-raising goal, and funds are still coming in.

Vancouver Island co-ordinator Wilf Burton said "this is the first time we have really topped the $200,000 figure, although in previous years we have come close."

Making the achievement even more noteworthy is that the Saanich peninsula returns have been included in past years, but this year were not. Two fund-raising units in Central Saanich and Sidney/North Saanich raised another $20,000 on their own.

Total contributions from Vancouver Island are expected to amount to more than $425,000 of the provincial target of $1.6 million. The campaign, which raises funds for cancer research, service to cancer patients, and education programs, ends Sept. 30.

Union bargainers turn down offer to Hydro workers

A new contract offer from B.C. Hydro to 3,700 clerical, office and related employees has been rejected by a union bargaining team on a number of grounds including a claim that it discriminates against lower-paid workers.

The Office and Technical Employees Union, armed with a strike mandate since June, has asked provincial mediator Jack Chapelas to file his report with Labor Minister Allan Williams.

It said in a prepared statement Tuesday it would await Williams' confirmation that the mediator has reported out before considering job action. No steps would be taken prior to a meeting of job stewards next Wednesday.

Half of the employees involved are on the Lower Mainland. The union says there are about 150 in Victoria and others elsewhere on Vancouver Island.

According to union negotiating committee chairman Fred de Moor, Hydro tabled an offer through the mediator that would increase wages by 6½ per cent retroactive to April 1, 1½ per cent next Oct. 1 and another 7 per cent on April 1, 1980, as part of a two-year package. He said, however, that the retroactive pay offered would not be calculated on gross earnings in the usual fashion, but only on straight time.

De Moor said cash increases of $55, $15 and $60 a month were offered to lower paid cafeteria and security personnel and that the final hike would amount to about four per cent—considerably less than that earmarked for those already earning more money.

He said the overall offer substantially erodes historic wage relationships, is "discriminatory toward certain lower-paid employees and contains several management proposals that take away or reduce conditions and provisions previously negotiated."

The last position taken by the union called for wage increases of 9.2 per cent in the first year and seven per cent in the second, along with cost-of-living adjustments. In addition it wanted salary scale adjustments it said would amount to about two per cent in the first year.

De Moor said the average wage would be about $1,500 a month under terms of an agreement that expired March 31.

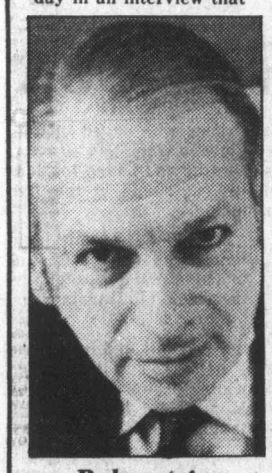
On June 4 employees voted 87 per cent in favor of a strike, but bargaining continued until July 20 when the union served strike notice.

Aid in sight for ex-POWs

British MP Airey Neave died last March in a terrorist attack outside Parliament but his efforts on behalf of former prisoners of war are still being felt.

Seven former POWs and victims of Nazi concentration camps may receive compensation from the German government through the efforts of Neave and a Victoria man, Norman Rubenstein.

Rubenstein, president of the B.C. chapter of the National Prisoners of War Association, European Theatre, said Tuesday in an interview that the Australian ombudsman had recommended that the Australian and New Zealand governments negotiate with the German government for compensation for the men.



Rubenstein

Both Rubenstein and Neave, who was MP for Abingdon and right-hand man to Margaret Thatcher when she was leader of the Opposition, applied pressure for some time to have the men compensated.

The seven men are from Australia and New Zealand. During the Second World War they were in various prisoner of war camps. They also spent time in concentration camps.

Neave was assassinated last March by a car bomb. Two Irish guerrilla groups claimed responsibility for the attack.

Neave had worked on behalf of former prisoners of war who had difficulty obtaining their pensions.

Neave and Rubenstein, who also works on behalf of former POWs, were captured together in Calais in 1940.

Just a plane dropout

Massive branch from large plane tree at Margaret Jenkins Elementary school in Fairfield is cut up by school district workmen after falling to the ground Tuesday. No one was injured and no damage occurred to school property, but trees will be examined to determine their safety before school opens next month, school district spokesman said. Fall is attributed to wind and long dry spell which has made trees more brittle than usual.

VISITORS COMPLAIN OF JOGGERS, BIKERS

Sidewalks taken over by wheelers

Joggers, cyclists and riders of skateboards are taking over Victoria sidewalks and there appears to be little the city can do to solve the problem.

This was the consensus after a brief but free-wheeling debate by city council's traffic committee Tuesday.

A letter from Tourism B.C. operations services director William Taylor, citing complaints received from visitors, sparked the discussion.

Tourists had complained of being "practically run over by a roller-skater on Government Street," and of "old men and ladies walking along the waterfront being pushed off the sidewalk by joggers," Taylor wrote.

He also gave complaints of bicycles being ridden on downtown sidewalks.

Committee chairman Ald. William McElroy said he was attempting to draft a bylaw allowing cyclists to use sidewalks on some of the city's heavily-congested streets.

"I'm in the process of finding out if we have authority to draft such a document," he said.

"But what we need is a common decency bylaw. It's obviously impossible to do anything about this problem."

Mayor Michael Young wondered whether sidewalks should be ruled off limits to pedestrians.

The discussion ended on a hilarous note as traffic engineer Derek Wild, responding to a question from city manager James Bramley about the fine for riding a bicycle on a sidewalk, said: "I would have to look that up. I believe it would mean a loss of demerit points."

Aldermen quickly received and filed Taylor's letter.

Laden wallet missing

A large sum of money was "lost or stolen" about 5 p.m. Tuesday in the Juan de Fuca recreation centre area of Colwood, Colwood RCMP said Tuesday.

The money was in a black leather wallet with some credit cards, police said. They would not divulge the amount of money or the name of the wallet owner.

City's approach cautious

Mayor won't be rushed into changing region plan

Victoria city council's planning committee is not going to be rushed into giving carte blanche approval to an amended bylaw aimed at tightening loopholes in the Capital Region District plan.

The committee agreed Tuesday to tell the board it could not support the document until the changes had been reviewed by staff members and debated by council.

Region directors gave the bylaw three readings last week and referred it to the individual councils and electoral area committees for comment. The bylaw will be presented for final adoption Aug. 22.

Mayor Michael Young said the plan undoubtedly needed changing, "but it should not be a patched-up job with no thought process involved."

The city, he said, wanted time to reflect on the fairly extensive changes in the bylaw.

"I have certain misgivings about the regional plan as it now exists," he said, "but I'm not going to be rushed into supporting the amendments. There's too much at stake."

Young also levelled a blast at Saanich council members who criticized city planning staff for not participating in a meeting called by Saanich and regional planners.

"Our planners were given very little advance notice of the meeting," he said. "I'm a little fed up with the innuendo and statements made by elected and municipal officials about our absence."

Agreement redefining what constituted a regional shopping centre was reached at the meeting between Saanich chief planner Gil Laurenson and acting regional planner Charles Wakelin, he observed.

The draft agreement between Saanich and the region was referred to the regional plan committee and the municipalities.

It provides for definitions of neighborhood, district, regional and central area shopping centres. District centres over 175,000 square feet or within half a mile of a municipal boundary would have to be approved by the region under the agreement.

CITY ORDERS DEVELOPER TO LIVE UP TO CONTRACT

A Victoria developer who chopped down two trees and drastically pruned another on the site of a five-storey condominium and restaurant at Niagara and Dallas Road, came within a whisker Tuesday of having his land-use contract revoked by Victoria city council's land management committee.

Foster Isherwood, through his development consultant Brian Jaundrew, admitted violating the contract.

Aldermen, after severely reprimanding the developer, voted to recommend to council a building permit be issued subject to an assurance that the project not deviate from the contract.

In other business, the committee:

- Will review next year a request by tennis players for the repainting of courts at Beacon Hill.
- Agreed to a lease agreement with the Victoria Association for the Care of the Dying for space at 1947 Cook Street.

Wheelchair-ramp buses on trial

Four B.C. Hydro buses equipped with hydraulic wheelchair ramps could be in regular service next month on the Beacon Hill run, Victoria city council's traffic committee was told Tuesday.

The buses would run for a six-month trial period and, if the program was successful, other buses would be equipped with wheelchair ramps.

The project is believed to be the first of its kind in Canada.

The driver will push a button which will cause the front steps to unfold into a platform. The wheelchair is rolled onto the platform and lifted until it is level with the bus floor.

In other transit developments, aldermen agreed to a routing change on the Beacon Hill service and a minor route change in the downtown area for South Fairfield buses.

Pair lose watches to knife wielder

A man in his 20s, armed with a five-inch hunting knife, held up a couple Tuesday night who were parked at the lookout in Beacon Hill Park, Victoria police said.

The two were robbed of their watches.

The suspect, who had a slim build and dark hair to his collar, fled on foot.

City police were investigating.

Police blame park crime rate on gays

A meeting place for homosexuals near Lover's Lane in the northeast corner of Beacon Hill Park will not be reopened to cars as recommended by the police department, Victoria city council's parks department decided Tuesday.

The lane, near Cook Street and Dallas Road, is in a wooded area and police asked that one-way traffic be allowed as a crime prevention measure.

Numerous robberies and six incidents of indecent acts on children of both sexes had occurred in that area of the park in the last few months, according to a police report.

Sporadic surveillance in the last three weeks had shown between five and 20 males, identified as homosexual and attempting to meet someone of similar persuasion, frequenting the area, aldermen were told.

The high incidence of crime in the relatively small uninhabited area was directly attributable to the number of homosexuals gathered there, the report stated.

"They are victims of robbery and perpetrators of acts toward male children of tender years."

More effective policing of the area was hindered by barricades at either end of the lane, erected following a fatal accident some years ago. Public pressure later resulted in traffic being banned from using the lane.

"Members of the public seldom use the lane, thereby leaving the woods to the homosexuals," the report stated.

Increased traffic movement and stepped up police patrols would, it was hoped, deter the high frequency of indecent exhibitions, molesting and robberies, aldermen heard.

Mayor Michael Young urged the committee to not treat the matter lightly "as I've read police reports and if we have a similar situation elsewhere in the city we're in real trouble."

Ald. William McElroy said opening the lane would give carte blanche to "a couple of cowboys to go whipping through there and decide to solve the homosexual problem."

Parks administrator Alan Smith suggested either replacing the barriers with locked gates to allow only police access, or opening the road and restricting it to police and maintenance vehicles.

However, a majority of the committee felt these suggestions would not be a workable solution.

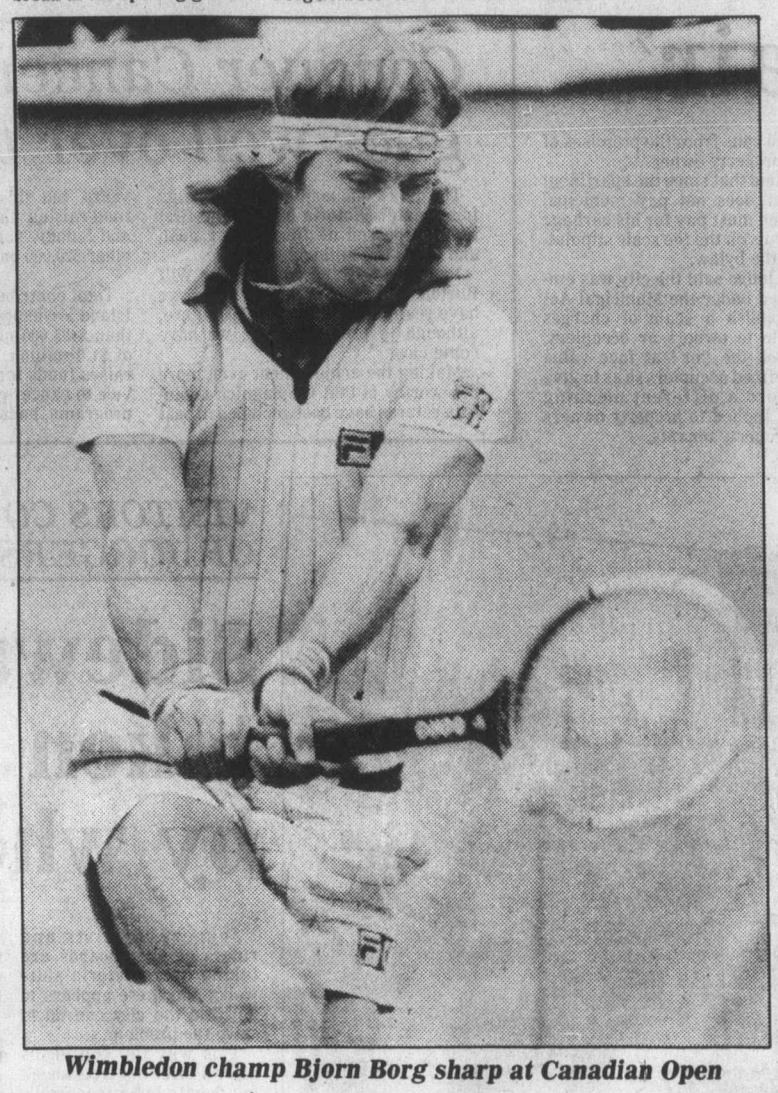
TORONTO (CP) — Wimbledon champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden ended a three-week layoff with an easy 6-2, 6-4 win over Bruce Manson of the United States in a first-round match Tuesday at the Canadian Open tennis championships.

Borg, whose only loss this year in the first round of any tournament was at the hands of Manson, made no mistake this time around in dominating the American in a strong wind at the York University tennis centre.

"If feels good after being off for three weeks," Borg said. "The conditions were difficult for both of us."

Borg broke Manson's service in the third and fifth games of the opening set, then went ahead 2-0 in the deciding set after a service break in the opening game.

Manson broke Borg for the only time in the match with the Swede leading 5-3, but Borg held service in the next game to take the match and advance to the second round against Ivan Molina of Colombia.



Wimbledon champ Bjorn Borg sharp at Canadian Open

In other first-round men's play, unseeded Phil Dent of Australia upset third-seeded Roscoe Tanner of the U.S. 6-7, 7-6, 6-3; fifth-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina downed John Austin of the U.S. 6-1, 6-4; fourth-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis of the U.S. beat Mark Cox of Britain 6-4, 6-3; Tomaz Smid beat junior Martin Wostenholme of Ottawa 6-3, 6-3 and Gene Mayer of the U.S. beat Dale Power of Ottawa 6-1, 6-1.

In the only women's singles match of the day, top-seeded Evonne Goolagong posted an easy 6-1, 6-2 win over Brenda Perry of New Zealand.

Borg said he plans to take a week off before playing the U.S. Open at Flushing Meadows, N.Y., in two weeks. He's been practicing four or five hours a day for the last five days to prepare for this tournament.

"I knew I had to play well because earlier this year I lost to him," Borg said. "We both play a lot from the base line."

"I was confident I could beat him again," Manson said. "I went out and tried to play steady and force him to make mistakes. He didn't."

Dent called his victory over the hard-serving Tanner "my first decent win in a long time, a year maybe."

"I just tried not to make too many errors."

In the first-round women's doubles match, Betsy Nagelsen of the U.S. and renata Tomanova of Czechoslovakia downed Marjorie Blackwood of Ottawa and Lise Senn of Toronto 6-3, 6-4.

In another women's doubles match, JoAnne Russell of the U.S. and countrywoman Janet Newberry defeated Julie Harrington of the U.S. and Nina Bland of Victoria 6-1, 6-3.

'Bring on 'Bellies' — Irish

The defending Western Lacrosse Association champions lead the Salmonbellies 3-1 in the best-of-seven semi-final and host the fifth game 8 p.m. at Memorial Arena.

The other semi-final is squared at 2-2 as the Vancouver Burrards surprised the Coqutilam Adanacs 16-9 Tuesday at Kerrisdale Arena.

The Adanacs and Burrards meet tonight at Coqutilam and the sixth game is Friday at Kerrisdale.

The best-of-seven final will start Monday with the Shamrocks, if they win, the home team.

Other final dates are Aug. 22, 24, 25 and if necessary Aug. 28, 29 and 30.

The Mann Cup is in the West this year and the Shamrocks are hoping to be home team for that best-of-seven series which will be played Sept. 4, 5, 7, 8 and if necessary 10, 12 and 13.

Shamrocks general manager Leon Hall said the team came out unscathed from the 18-10 win at New Westminster Monday and are injury free heading into tonight's contest.

Goaltender Larry Smeltzer, the standout of the series to date, was given a bit of a rest in the third period Monday but will be back between the pipes tonight.

The Shamrocks have outscored New Westminster 54-37 in the series and have a 29-14 edge at Memorial Arena.

Goss said following Monday's loss that Smeltzer had many of the Salmonbellies thinking he's unbeatable but added that if they keep running and shooting for the corners they'll eventually get to the Shamrock netminder.

Smeltzer gave credit to his defence and Hall said the Shamrocks checked well and stayed with a running game throughout.

Mussels move up

BELLINGHAM — Victoria Mussels gained a share of second place in the Northern Division of the Northwest League Tuesday.

Gary Ledbetter cracked a pair of two-run homers and Tom Candiatti pitched a five-hitter as the Mussels opened a two-game set at Bellingham with a 6-3 victory.

Mussels went into the contest 4½ games behind Walla Walla Padres who were to meet the Mets at Grays Harbor.

Ledbetter gave the Mussels a 2-0 lead with a home run in the second inning and he hit his fifth home run as a Mussel in the four-run fifth inning.

Medals to Tobacco, Fougner

B.C. hoopsters still unbeaten

SASKATOON (CP) — B.C. and Saskatchewan remained undefeated in women's basketball after early games Tuesday as the Western Canada Summer Games entered its second day of competition.

Saskatchewan downed Manitoba 71-65 Tuesday and B.C. bested Alberta 60-52. Monday, B.C. beat Manitoba 69-53 and Saskatchewan topped Alberta 66-50.

Men's and women's basketball is a round-robin competition that reaches gold-medal play tonight.

Organizers estimated more than 6,000 spectators watched Games events Monday. They saw Alberta take eight gold medals, B.C. seven and Manitoba three. Manitoba gained its third medal after fencing results finally were announced early Tuesday.

B.C. ran its gold-medal total to 10 with three victories in canoeing Tuesday afternoon.

Gold medals are awarded first-place competitors. All other participants are given achievement awards for earning the right to be at the Games, held every four years for Western Canadian athletes of potential international calibre.

Later in the evening, Victoria athletes came up big in track and field.

Judy Tobacco ran a time of 54.73 seconds to capture firdt -place in the women's 400 metres while Brent Fougner took the men's triple jump with a distance of 15.41 metres.

Cheryl Noble of Victoria was fifth in the 400 metres, with a time of 55.99, while Wendy Davies was sixth in the 100m-hurdles at 15.90.

While Saskatchewan went wanting in the first day of competition Monday, Alberta showed most its strength in track and field, taking seven of medals there. The eighth came in canoeing after a Manitoba team had to scratch and B.C. was disqualified. Saskatchewan had not entered the race.

B.C. defeated Alberta 2-1 in field hockey but lost 1-0 to Saskatchewan.

B.C.'s water-polo team edged Saskatchewan 8-7 and doubled Manitoba 16-7.

She was part of a team which placed four in the K4 500.

In track and field, Anne Webster of Victoria was third in the 3,000 metres. Her time was 9:59.7.

tom keyser

One otherwise nondescript spring day in the foggy ruins of time, an otherwise nondescript little kid opened a package of gum and cards.

Brushing away the bubblegum dust, pink and aromatic, he beheld a sight of considerable wonder: Andy Carey, an otherwise nondescript third-baseman for the New York Yankees, resplendent in pinstripes, hefting lumber.

Rockets exploded in the little kid's head, between chaws of that sickeningly sweet gum. It was really neat. You could call it love.

Ever since that balmy morning in a Burnaby schoolyard, I have been a devotee of the sport Carey played for so long with such commendable mediocrity — baseball.

As a youth, I crept off to Vancouver's Capilano Stadium whenever possible, sitting in the 50-cent bleachers along first base. I thrilled to the heroics of luminaries like Chet Nichols, Lenny Green, Woody Huyke, Jim Driscoll, Charlie White, Sal Bando and Howie Goss, Vancouver Mounties all. I even saw Brooks Robinson once.

You are reading the confessions of one of the few living humans to ever attend a home game of the New Westminster Frasers. But the Frasers tested the patience of even devoted afficionados.

Like the Arabs, the Frasers folded their tents and stole quietly away after one season. Their attendance was poorest in the league.

Which brings us, the above self-indulgence not withstanding, to our topic at hand. Namely, the Victoria Mussels, independent members of that same Northwest League.

Something there is about the baseball maniac that forces him to live and die with his team, to hang on every word of news, every trivial statistic relating to his heros.

So it is in Victoria. But, apparently, baseball addicts represent a microscopic colony on this temperate, recreation paradise of the Pacific.

They don't make bubblegum cards of Class-A ballplayers. Maybe that's the reason.

Whatever, Victoria won't have Jim and Lynn Chapman to kick around any more. The well-meaning, underfinanced and inexperienced brothers are going back to the mainland with their tails between their legs.

After taking a financial bath they couldn't afford, the Chapmans woke up one fine morning and announced: "Enough."

Better late than never. The brothers have had it.

Take heart, all ye who worship the horsehide.

Richmond has heard of the New Westminster Frasers. He knows all about the tribulations suffered by the Chapmans in Victoria.

He remains undaunted.

Like a true baseball nut, Richmond has a blind side where his game is concerned. So, apparently, do interests here in Canada, down in California and even somewhere in Ohio.

These interests, as yet anonymous, represent groups literally breaking down Richmond's door. Why? To keep baseball in Victoria, that's why.

The devil, you say?

Richmond blithely asserts, nay insists, the Northwest League will be back in business at Royal Athletic Park next summer.

Never mind the pitiful attendance, the apathy. Never mind that it may be hard convincing the city to go for another summer of practically giving their park rental away.

Never mind that this is a city of retired admirals, active yachters, retired militiamen, active churchgoers, retired millionaires and active nature lovers — and very few fans of minor league baseball.

Never mind that people can make the short trip to Seattle or Vancouver and see major-league sport of every variety.

Forget all that. The Northwest League is coming back.

"All that franchise needs is better promotion," argues Richmond. He cites the Eugene Emeralds, the league's flagship.

Under the direction of experienced management, plus the security of a major league player-development contract, the Emeralds flourish. They draw an average of more than 1,000 fans a night. The Mussels average around 200.

Apparently he's learned a few tricks.

Well, let's wait and see. It's hard to believe businessmen with real dollars on the line would take another flyer on a two-time loser like Victoria.

I, for one, am pulling for them. As the hardball-happy protaganist of the early passages of this piece, the runny-nosed tyke who fell head over heels for Andy Carey, I'll show up at the park once in a while.

But (if Richmond isn't just talking through his PR-man's hat) maybe that tiny little group of fanatics and I'll be the only ones there.

New West earns spot

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — New Westminster Junior Salmonbellies swept a best-of-seven semi-final series 4-1 Tuesday night by defeating Richmond Roadrunners 19-13 in a Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League game.

New Westminster now plays the winner of a series between Burnaby Cablevision and Coquitlam Junior Adanacs.

Brian Cowe topped New Westminster scoring with four goals and seven assists, J. C. Kootnekoff and Herb Whitehead scored three each and Terry Miller and Dan MacIssac added two each.

Greg Jensen scored three goals, and Rod Jensen and Mike Holob scored two each for Richmond, which led 6-4 after the first period but trailed 11-7 after 40 minutes.

Victoria still alive

Brian Martin pitched a two-hitter for Victoria and Clay Bertoia and Darrell Richardson had three hits each.

Today Victoria, which has lost once in the double-knockout tournament, plays the loser of the winners' bracket final between Washington adn Oregon.

Seniors all even

Lumberworld and Farmers Construction are all even in the Senior Amateur Baseball League playoffs and have a week to prepare for their next meeting.

Mike Squire pitched a six-hitter and Mike Laffin had two hits and drove in three runs Tuesday as Lumberworld defeated Farmers 9-3 at Lambrick Park and tied the best-of-five series at 1-1.

The third game isn't until Aug. 22 as several players from both teams will travel with the Victoria All-Stars to the Canadian senior "B" championships at Lloydminster, Sask.

Red-hot Fred sparks Red Sox

Boston Red Sox last went to the world series in 1975, the year a rookie named Fred Lynn was named most valuable player in the American League.

Lynn is doing even better in 1979 and giving the Red Sox a big boost in the Eastern Division title race.

The Boston centrefielder drove in six runs with his 33rd and 34th home runs and a double Tuesday as the Red Sox belted Minnesota Twins 12-1 at Fenway Park.

Carlton Fisk and Carl Yastrzemski also homered in a 19-hit attack against three Minnesota pitchers, while Boston hurlers Dennis Eckersley, Bob Stanley and Bill Campbell combined for a six-hitter.

In 1975, Lynn led the league in doubles with 47, hit 21 home runs and batted .331 and added rookie-of-the-year honors to the MVP award.

He was three-for-four Tuesday and boosted his league-leading average to .338 and his two homers put him three ahead of teammate Jim Rice.

The Red Sox nailed down the decision quickly on solo homers by Fisk, his eighth, Yastrzemski, his 19th and 402nd of his career, and Lynn in the first as Minnesota starter Pete Redfern was shelled after throwing only 12 pitches.

Eckersley allowed only three singles in six innings, but with Boston far in front he was given a rest. In earning his eighth consecutive victory, Eckersley became the American League's first 16-game winner. He has lost five.

Boston remained five games behind Baltimore Orioles who edged visiting Chicago White Sox 2-1 on Al Bumbry's bases-loaded, two-out single in the 12th inning.

In National League highlights, Philadelphia Phillies and Montreal Expos fell further behind first-place Pittsburgh Pirates.

Cincinnati Reds edged the Phillies 2-1 in 10 innings while Houston Astros got by Montreal 2-1 and Pittsburgh thumped San Diego Padres 7-1.

Knight started the 10th with a single, only the third hit of the game off Steve Carlton.

Pitcher Joaquin Andujar hit Houston's first home run at the Astrodome since July 15 to give Houston the win. Andjar nailed a two-run, inside-the-park shot in the second inning and went on to pitch a four-hitter for his career high 12th victory.

Last-minute Ottawa pass brings tie with Eskimos

OTTAWA (CP) — Peter Stenerson's 39-yard touchdown catch with 57 seconds to play lifted Ottawa Rough Riders to a 24-24 tie with Edmonton Eskimos in an action-packed Canadian Football League game Tuesday night.

The pass, from ailing Ottawa-quarterback Condredge Holloway, followed by one minute an Edmonton touchdown by Brian Kelly, who caught a 65-yard pass from back-up Edmonton quarterback Warren Moon.

Ottawa had control of play in the first half but managed only 10 points. Edmonton was much stronger in the second half but also had trouble scoring.

Ross Clarkson, on a four-yard pass from Holloway, and fullback Mike Murphy, on a three-yard run, scored the other Ottawa touchdowns. Kicker Gerry Organ converted all three Ottawa scores and booted a 42-yard field goal.

Halfback Angelo Santucci, on a 47-yard pass play with quarterback Tom Wilkinson, and wide-receiver John Konihowski, on a 12-yard pass from Moon, scored the other Edmonton touchdowns. DaveCutler converted each time and added a 44-yard field goal.

The tie leaves the Eskimos with a record of three wins and two ties while the Riders have two wins and the tie to go with two defeats.

The game opened up a bit early in the third quarter when Santucci scored his touchdown.

Ian Mofford returned the ensuing kick-off 110 yards but didn't get a touchdown because of a clipping penalty, the ball being brought back to the Edmonton 30-yard line. Several plays later, Clarkson caught his touchdown pass, atoning for having dropped what should have been a touchdown throw in the second quarter.

Bombers make two-rung climb

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers proved they are only third worst team in the Canadian Football League Tuesday night, defeating Hamilton Tiger-Cats 27-21.

It was the first win of the season for the Bombers, who dropped their previous four games. The Tiger-Cats are 1-5, while Saskatchewan Roughriders are winless.

The Bombers almost convinced the crowd of 24,660 that they wanted to lose the game late in the fourth quarter, after Hamilton scored a touchdown to narrow the gap.

On the next play, Gary Rosolowich, Winnipeg's lone deep receiver, let Neil Lumsden's kickoff bounce into the end zone for a single point, with more than two minutes remaining.

Another Hamilton converted touchdown would have given the Tiger-Cats a win, but they never got their hands on the ball, as Gord Paterson made a clutch second-down pass reception to move the ball out of danger for the Bombers.

Winnipeg quarterback Dieter Brock threw three touchdown passes in the first half, two to running back Jim Washington and one to wide receiver Mike Holmes.

Kicker Bernie Ruoff converted all three Winnipeg majors and also booted two field goals in the second half.

Brock Aynsley scored both Hamilton touchdowns, on passes in the second quarter from starting quarterback Charlie Weatherbie and in the fourth quarter from Ed Smith.

Lumsden kicked two field goals, one in each half, in addition to two converts and the single point.

The 36-year-old veteran battled with the 23-year-old Renner throughout the day in a see-saw battle that saw as many as 10 golfers in contention.

Renner, who fired a four-under-par 67 for a four-round total of 16-under-par 268, held the lead briefly in the late going by posting birdies on the 15th and 16th holes.

But McGee birdied the 15th, 16th and 17th to take command.

McGee's first prize of $54,000 raised his year's earnings to $152,400, 11th on the PGA money list.

Rain lengthened the tournament by two days. The second round was delayed from Friday afternoon to Saturday afternoon, and Sunday's play was washed out.

The decision to play the final round on Tuesday marked the first time a PGA event had been extended that long since 1967. The tournament began last Thursday.

Tied for fifth were Mark Hayes, Lou Graham and J. C. Snead at 13-under par 271. One stroke behind them were Hubert Green and Michael Brannan.

Last champions just miss ouster

Defending-champion Bill Thompson and the fellow who ruled the year before him were given stiff tests in the second round of match-play in the Northwest Seniors Golf Association tournament Tuesday.

Both Thompson, the defending champion from Victoria, and Parent, the 1977 winner from Seattle, were taken to the 18th hole at Victoria Golf Club before scoring 1 up decisions. Thompson edged Floyd Robbins of Seattle and will play Herb Griswold of Portland today while Parent beat Gordon Verley of the host club and will play Arnold Groth of Seattle today.

Griswold downed Richard Munger of Seattle 3 and 2, Groth defeated William Hyde of Tacoma 4 and 2 while in other matches: Bill McColl of Victoria defeated clubmate Jake Peters on the 19th; Ray Cranston edged Ken Newberry of Vancouver Capilano 3 and 2; Max Hunter of Tacoma beat Walter Daggett of Seattle 3 and 2; and Keith Welts of Seattle downed Lloyd Murray of Victoria 7 and 5.

The championship flight starts at 1:30 p.m. today and McColl meets Cranston and Hunter plays Welts.

WIN! $1,000.00 IN CASH PRIZES EVERY OTHER WEEK!

WIN! GRAND PRIZE TRIP FOR TWO TO HAWAII, By Wardair

The object is to match the official letters published every day with the letters in the grid which you have filled in with your name (see samples 1 and 2). When you have circled a row of letters across, vertically, or diagonally either way, send your entry in for the bi-weekly draw for cash prizes. You may submit as many entries as you wish per game, but each must be in a separate envelope.

LETTERS FOR TODAY, GAME No. 4 ONLY

IMPORTANT!

THE NAME GAME
Rules and Procedures

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print your name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.
Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.
2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, but may only be used once in any one entry.
3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.
4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.
5. All entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in the Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.
6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.
7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.
8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.
9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to the The Name Game will be final.

Rams given usual rating but could get a struggle

Associated Press

Every year seems to be the year of the Ram in the National Conference's Western Division, and the 1979 National Football League season promises to be no different.

Los Angeles Rams, winners of the division the last six years, should be even better than last year, when they went 12-4 and made it to the second round of the NFL playoffs — a 28-0 loss to Dallas Cowboys.

The real surprise in the NFC West in 1978 was the emergence of Atlanta Falcons — perhaps a sign of things to come. Atlanta finished with five consecutive vuctories, then, as a wild-card team in the playoffs, edged Philadelphia Eagles.

The Falcons, with a healthy Steve Bartkowski at quarterback, should improve on their 9-7 record.

New Orleans Saints, coming off a 7-9 campaign, could be the surprise of the NFC West this time around if quarterback Archie Manning and running-back Chuck Muncie stay healthy.

San Francisco '49ers, with O. J. Simpson still hobbled by a knee injury, are coming off a 2-14 season and Bill Walsh, their new coach and general-manager, isn't expected to work any immediate miracles.It will be astonishing if the 49ers are a factor.

What makes Los Angeles look better this year is its deep, healthy running corps. Last year, injuries to Lawrence McCutcheon, Wendell Tyler and Elvis Peacock weakened their rushing game. Those three are back in good shape.

The Rams, with coach Ray Malavasi back for his second year, should also benefit from quarterback Pat Haden's additional year of experience.

The season will be the Rams' last in the Memorial Coliseum — they're moving 35 miles south to Anaheim in 1980 — and their first under new-owner Georgia Rosenbloom, widow of Carroll Rosenbloom.

The Falcons will be basically the same squad that moved into the NFL playoffs for the first time in the club's 12-year history.

Bartkowski enjoyed the first injury-free season of his four-year NFL career and rewrote the Falcon record book by completing 187 of 369 passes for 2,489 yards and 10 touchdowns.

He also triggered the amazing comeback story that produced four 20-17 victories with scores in the final 10 seconds, another regular-season victory in the final two minutes, and the playoff victory over Philadelphia that came when he threw a touchdown pass in the final two minutes.

Another key player in the Falcons' drive was placekicker Tim Mazzetti, the former Philadelphia bartender who joined Atlanta after the season was six weeks old and converted 18 consecutive extra points and succeeded 13 times with 16 field-goal chances.

This season, Atlanta-coach Leeman Bennett hopes rookies William Andrews of Auburn and James Mayberry of Colorado can help the club develop a more potent rushing attack by pushing starters Bubba Bean and Haskel Stanback.

The Atlanta defence should be fairly solid again.

In New Orleans, Manning, who completed 291 of 471 passes for 3,416 yards last year, is expected to have a good season because of the quality of the Saints' offensive line. Scrambling for his life most of his NFL career, Manning will be operating behind a line that includes Conrad Dobler and Emmanuel Zanders, both back from knee surgery, plus centre John Hill and tackle J. T. Taylor.

The Saints, who count on Muncie to give them more balance on offence, have a deep and talented group of pass catchers, with Ike Harris and Wes Chandler the probable wide receivers. The tight end is Henry Childs, who averaged 16.4 yards a catch last year, tops in the NFL for his position.

New Orleans should get some added scoring punch from rookie-kicker Russell Erxleben, who is expected to handle both the place-kicking and punting chores.

Canada tabs 155 for student team

TORONTO (CP) — A team of 155 athletes has been selected to compete in the World Student Games in Mexico City Sept. 2-13, the Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union announced Tuesday.

The team includes a number of athletes who competed at the Pan-American Games in Puerto Rico last month, such as hammer thrower Scott Neilson of New Westminster, who won a gold medal in San Juan.

Besides track and field, the Canadians are entered in basketball, swimming, diving, water polo, fencing, gymnastics, soccer, tennis and volleyball.

One of the apparently weak areas on the Canadian team is the swimming squad. Most of Canada's top international swimmers are heading for the Soviet Union for a dual meet later this month and then the World Cup in Tokyo in early September. The team going to Mexico has 16 men swimmers and only six women.

Among Canada's top medal prospects at Mexico City will be the national men's and women's basketball teams. The women's team won a bronze medal at the Pan-Am Games while the men's team finished fourth.

McGinnis League bounces Heywood

Stuffy McGinnis League All-Stars celebrated fan appreciation night by giving the fans something to appreciate Tuesday.

Len Carolan, Ray Beveridge and Barry Wilkin combined for a two-hitter and Bob Wilson clubbed two singles, a double and a home run as the Central Park boys bounced the Hewyood Avenue League All-Stars 8-0 in a men's exhibition softball game.

It was fitting that Carolan, Beveridge, Wilkin and Wilson were the standouts as all four were award winners in pre-game ceremonies.

Carolan, 12-3 for Juan de Fuca Builders with 135 strikeouts an earned-run-average of 0.84 and a .372 batting average, was named most valuable player while Beveridge, 12-3 for Elks-Athletics, shared most-improved-player honors with John Martin of Tally-Ho and Wilkin, 11-2 with Seaboard Construction, was chosen the outstanding pitcher.

Wilson, also of Elks-Athletics, won the batting championship with a .402 average. He hit four home runs and struck out only once in 87 at bats.

Kevin Gilbert of Tally-Ho hit .386 and was named rookie-of-the-year while John Martin batted .326.

Don Schlemmer of Port Angeles Telecable was named coach of the year for guiding his team to the playoffs for the first time since 1974, Norm Goudie of K & R Sooke won the home run title with seven and Jim Anderson of Port Angeles was the run-batted-in leader with 22.

Carolan started Tuesday's game and struck out four, walked none and didn't give up a hit in three innings while Beveridge walked two, gave up a single and struck out five in the middle three innings and Wilkin finished things off by walking one, allowing a double to Theo Vandenburg and striking out four.

In Senior Women's League playoffs: Butler Bros. won the consolation series with a 7-1 decision over Strathcona Hotel at Hyacinth Park while Stockers North Americans edged Bemister's Welding 2-1 to take a 1-0 lead in the best-of-three league championship.

Mavis Underwood pitched a four-hitter for Butler Bros., Diana Underwood drove in Lisa Underwood with the winning run in the second inning.

Pinch-hitter Charlene Eden singled in the winning run in the ninth inning to give Kathy Hawley the win for Stockers.

The second game is today.

Meanwhile Strathcona Hotel edged Birch Builders 8-7 to take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five final. Wayne Winger had four hits, including a home run, and drove in five runs.

English soccer becomes all-nations affair

Invasion of foreign players in full swing

LONDON (Reuter) — English soccer, for many years enriched only by the skills of the neighboring Scots, Welsh and Irish, has been thrown open to invasion from the rest of Europe — and even Argentina.

Two of the World Cup-winning Argentines, Osvaldo Ardiles and Ricardo Villa — Ossie and Ricky to the fans here — were imported by London's Tottenham last season and became firm favourites, especially Ardiles.

Other foreigners followed, though some were less successful in England than had seemed likely.

Polish World Cup captain Kazimierz Deyna failed to hold a place in the struggling Manchester City team.

Ardiles' World Cup teammate, Alberto Tarantini, returned home from Birmingham, who, despite his efforts, were relegated to England's Division II.

But the migration of players has gathered momentum.

The leading clubs were slow to draw on foreign talent. Nottingham Forest, Liverpool, Everton, Arsenal and West Bromwich, five of the top six in the 1977-8 championship, had no reinforcement from abroad. Manchester City, by bringing in Deyna, was the exception.

This year's top six includes Ipswich, which pioneered in bringing Dutch players to England last season. Arnold Muhren and Frans Thijssen became key members of its midfield.

West Bromwich, which finished one point and one place behind runner-up Nottingham Forest, has joined the interchange program— as exporters.

In a surprise deal, their black winger Laurie Cunningham moved to Spanish champions Real Madrid for almost $2.6 million. His replacement, from no further afield than Manchester City, is Peter Barnes, who had contested Cunningham for a place on the England team.

More important, Liverpool, the new champion, have imported talent for the first time, Avi Cohen of Israel.

Manager Brian Clough resolved to inject new talent into his squad. He brought Scottish international left back Frank Gray from Leeds to succeed the veteran Frank Clark. He also signed a second Scot, Asa Hartford, from Manchester City as replacement for Archie Gemmill.

Manchester City's extrovert manager Malcolm Allinson must have more faith in European players than Clough. Whatever his reservations about Deyna, he has gone abroad to replace England centre-back Dave Watson, who has signed for the West German club Werder Bremen.

His successor will be Dragoslav Stefanovic of Yugoslavia. To underline how radical is the shake-up at the club, Allison named him as captain even before he had received a work permit to play in Britain.

How hard is it for foreigners to adapt to the English soccer scene?

Muhren compared styles in the new International Football book.

"Football in Holland today is much slower than the English game, being more like chess," he said. "Probably both England and Holland would benefit if they adapted their game and learned a little bit from each other."

Muhren, the first Dutch player to move to England, said play in England is generally more exciting.

"All the games are fiercely competitive," he said. "With Ipswich you cannot be sure of winning even at home to the team at the bottom of the first division. It is this high average level of ability that makes the English championship the best in the world."

Muhren said he had one advantage over some other soccer wanderers.

"I already spoke English when I joined Ipswich."

Of his tiny son and daughter he said: "By the time they are five they should speak English very well."

In the same book, Kevin Keegan, who left Liverpool to try his luck in West German soccer, commented on the player exploring foreign territory.

Keegan, who has been elected European footballer-of-the-year, helped his club Hamburg to win the West German championship.

"The game in West Germany is very different," he said. "The Germans use a libero playing free behind the defence and he stays deep so that there is virtually never an offside decision. There are almost no high crosses in the German game either. It is just as quick as in England, but in a different way.

"I have found that the German game suits me better." He likes the personal duel of man-to-man marking. "You might say it gives me job satisfaction," he added.

Last call for Bingo the elephant?

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Bingo, the good-natured elephant "owned" by Lansing school children, is ailing again — this time with a mysterious sickness that has caused her to stop eating and drinking.

Zoo officials said they hope blood tests taken this week will disclose the cause of the malady that is steadily sapping the strength of the 4,000-pound star attraction at the city's small Potter Park Zoo.

Zoo director Gerry Miller said, "She's lost weight and is going downhill that way. Her condition continues to be very critical and she doesn't have a lot of strength — a lot of get up and zip." Dehydration has also become a problem.

If officials cannot find out what is wrong with Bingo, Miller said, "I suppose at some point in time we'll have to make a decision." He said he would "hate to say" whether that decision would involve destroying the elephant.

Ironically, the 7-year-old pachyderm seemed to have been recovering well after nearly dying from a rock that was lodged in her throat.

But last Wednesday, Bingo, who normally consumes about 45 pounds per day of grain-based pellets, simply stopped eating. Zoo officials have tried unsuccessfully to stimulate her appetite with vitamins and steroids.

At one point Sunday, Bingo stopped breathing and had to be revived with a stimulant.

Miller said it is not clear whether her condition is related to the earlier problem.

"I suppose anything is possible," he said. "It could be an after-effect or it could not even be related. We have no idea at this point what it could be. It seems to be something in the stomach but we don't know what."

Casting couch: Case of the naked redhead

By CHARLES SCHREGER
Colonist-Los Angeles Times Service

HOLLYWOOD — What would a story on casting directors be without a casting couch angle? Or, in this case, a casting couch story that could have been.

Bob La Sanka was interviewing actresses for a Universal film, Red Sky at Morning, nine years ago, when a beautiful redhead walked into his office.

La Sanka was looking for a woman to play a small part that involved some nudity.

THE TWO WERE TALKING when suddenly the redhead changed the subject. La Sanka remembers the meeting:

"She said, 'I've got a terrific figure.'

"I looked her over and said, 'Yeah, I can tell.'

"SO SHE SAID, 'You wanna see it?'

"And I said, 'No, that's OK. I can tell.'"

To which the redhead responded by taking off her dress. There she was, standing in La Sanka's office stark naked.

"I THOUGHT IT WAS FUNNY as hell," La Sanka said.

"But then, when she was getting dressed, I told her, 'You know, you're not gonna get this part. You know why? You're too inhibited.'"

If the casting couch exists, casting directors aren't admitting it. Obviously, though, it's an issue they've heard raised before because just about all of them seem to have smart-aleck comments about it.

"AS FAR AS THE CASTING couch goes," said one casting director, "I'm sorry it's gone away." A fairly typical reply to the "Does the casting couch exist?" question.

But, clever answers aside, has it gone away? Raise the question to young, hungry, struggling actresses and actors — you'll get no smart-aleck responses. It exists, they'll tell you, in many forms — offers for a weekend in Las Vegas, a date, as well as the direct and overt gesture in the casting office during an interview.

There are other alleged abuses casting directors supposedly are guilty of — under-the-table payoffs, coercing actors to sign up for seminars they conduct, casting only clients of agent friends, casting only friends, casting husbands or wives.

AGAIN, IF IT'S TRUE, NO one's saying so, although Warner Bros.' Dianne Crittenden is candid about the dilemma of helping friends. And casting directors often have a lot of acting acquaintances.

"There's nothing evil about trying to help friends," said Crittenden, "and I do."

Probably the most common abuse by casting directors is simple inconsideration, rudeness. An actor may wait two months to see a casting director, then on the day of the appointment sit for two hours in a reception area as cheerful as an unemployment office and finally be shuffled into the casting director's office to be told, "You have five minutes to impress me." It happens. So does the audition where a nervous actor delivers his lines in between a series of phone calls. That also happens, a lot. It's not the kind of situation likely to put a tense performer at ease.

ONE AREA OF ABUSE TO WHICH some casting directors plead guilty is taking on the double life of casting and personnal management.

Barbara Clamen, a casting director with offices in New York and Los Angeles, manages Linda Manz, among other actors and actresses. Fred Roos, now with Francis Coppola's American Zoetrope did it when he was a casting director. And Joyce Selznick definitely manages.

As a personal manager, Selznick's job is to "guide" careers, which is a bit different from an agent's job, although the distinction is subtle.

NONETHELESS, SELZNICK HAS a half-dozen actors and actresses whom she manages, among them, Ronee Blakely, Season Hubley, Don Stroud and Kurt Russell, whom she cast as Elvis Presley in the TV movie Elvis!

Selznick claims conflicts can be avoided and that she shows no favoritism to her clients when casting for films and television. Other casting directors say they think there is an inherent conflict between the two professions.

Do casting directors start careers? Do they discover stars?

THERE ARE TWO DISTINCT schools of thought here.

Selznick, who prefers the title "talent director" to "casting director," helped foster careers while on staff at Columbia for 17 years. She represents the school that says casting directors launch careers.

Selznick will boast that she is responsible for the careers of Candice Bergen, Cicely Tyson, Faye Dunaway, Telly Savalas and Gary Busey.

"I CAN GO ON WITH A list that never stops," she said. "I had a file three inches thick on why Robert Redford was going to be a big star before anyone had heard of him."

Mike Fenton expresses the line of the other school. He puts it simply: "I've cast a lot of actors. But I never discovered anybody."

They owe me nothing. In fact, casting directors insist that they owe actors everything. Without them, without talented people, without new discoveries, they have no job.

SAID JANE FEINBERG, speaking, really, for her profession:

"When someone walks in the office and they fit the bill, when they're what I'm looking for, I want to say, 'Oh, thank you, you're wonderful.'"

Mariners may get change of owners

SEATTLE (AP) — Oil company-executive Victor D. Alhadeff says he may seek to gain financial control of Seattle Mariners of baseball's American League.

"I have met with a number of the owners of the Mariners, and I am in the process of analysing whether or not it would be a very prudent investment for me and what type of financing could be arranged and what would be involved," Alhadeff said.

"I think there is a wide range of possibilities, but probably what the most likely outcome would be is that a number of the partners would end up selling their interest and a couple could end up staying in," he added. "It would end up basically as a restructuring."

Alhadeff, 33, is a nephew of part-owner Walter Shoenfeld and a second cousin of Morrie Alhadeff, operator of Longacres racetrack. He heads ENI Corp., a firm which conducts oil exploration throughout the United States.

He said he didn't expect to complete his research on the team, beset with sagging performance on the field and at the box office, until "at least the end of the season."

One part-owner, Jim Stillwell, said in an interview last week he "wasn't 100 per cent sure of staying on as a Mariner partner, but I and my family would sure like to."

Another, Lester Smith, said the club's six owners may have lost more than $5 million in the three years since it was established as an expansion franchise. In an interview last week, he indicated that he would "take a look at any concrete proposal."

There was no immediate comment from four of the Mariners' owners, including entertainer Danny Kaye, nor from Taul Watanabe, a wealthy Burlington Northern railroad vice-president who expressed interest in the Mariners last December.

Golfing in Newfoundland a winter sport in August

CORNER BROOK, Nfld. (CP) — Wind-swept rain and bone-chilling temperatures have turned the short, tricky Blomidon golf course into a treacherous obstacle course as play begins today in the Canadian junior women's and interprovincial championships.

The low pressure system that lashed the U.S. eastern seaboard with heavy wind and rain forcing cancellation of several sports events has hit Newfoundland's west coast.

Golfers at Tuesday's practice round were whipped by rain, swept along by winds with gusts as high as 106 kilometres an hour and temperatures of 12 degrees.

None of the golfers, dressed as though they were departing on a late-fall camping trip, fared well.

A total of 71 golfers are entered in the 54-hole tournament with Ontario and Quebec sending the largest contingents of 14 each. Provincial teams are made up of three golfers whose first 36-hole scores decide the provincial championship.

These scores then count in the third and final round Friday for the individual title.

The 5,600-yard, 18-hole course overlooks the scenic Bay of Islands, which is fed by the Humber River. The holes wind their way through heavy rough and thick woods with sloping fairways which force golfers to play a variety of lies.

More wind and rain is expected today, but organizers maintained that play would begin as scheduled.

Fierce competition for both the individual and team titles are expected due to the absence of Montreal's Michele Guilbault, now a senior.

Guilbault shot an opening round 69 followed by a 71 to lead Quebec to a 21-stroke victory over British Columbia in the 1978 championship. Quebec's team score of 298 was the lowest in the tournaments 23-year history.

Guilbault's 54-hole total of 220, lowest score ever in the three-round national event, gave her the crown by a 12-stroke margin over Toronto's Karin Mundinger, who now also is a senior.

Montrealer Josee Perusse, 18, is an early favorite. Her two handicap is the lowest in the field and organizers feel her experience gives her a decided edge.

But Perusse will have her hands full with local favorite Rebecca Stark, an 18-year-old with a six handicap. Stark now lives in Armdale, N.S., but grew up in Corner Book and knows the Blomidon course well.

Others mentioned included Christine Teno of Tecumseh, Ont.; Lynn Hurd, 17, of Parry Sound, Ont.; 16-year-old Wendy Swift of Lloydminister, Sask.; Dawn Coe, 18 of Lake Cowichan, B.C.: Brenda Burns, 18, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.; and Patty Grant of Prince George, B.C. All have handicaps of five.

Prominent newcomers include 13-year-old Heather Kusmich of Trenton, Ont., and Nancy Ann Callan of Victoria. Both golfers have an eight handicap.

The team competition is expected to be a dogfight between Quebec and Ontario. Ontario has won six times in the last 10 years with Quebec winning three and finishing second three times.

It wasn't greenies, claims Rose

This time, the controversy stemmed from comments printed in the September issue of Playboy magazine.

Rose is quoted as saying: "Well, I might have taken a greenie (amphetamine) last week. I mean if you want to call it a greenie. . . . So a greenie is a diet pill. That's all a greenie is, a diet pill."

Rose was asked later: "You keep saying you might take a greenie. Would you? Have you?"

Rose then is reported to have answered: " Yeah, I'd do it. I've done it."

Rose said this week he didn't say those things.

"I told her (Samantha Stevenson, co-author of the story) that I've never seen greenies in a clubhouse in baseball. I said I heard something about greenies being at San Diego Stadium for a football game, but I never have seen them in a baseball clubhouse.

"I did take a painkiller once for a bad shoulder, but there's nothing illegal about that. She was just looking for a controversial story to make a name for herself."

Jets trade vet

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Jets have traded the National Hockey League rights to veteran defenceman Paul Terbenche to Atlanta Flames for future considerations, Jets general manager John Ferguson announced Tuesday.

Ealey gets loose from Argo grip

TORONTO (CP) — When Toronto Argonauts tried to trade Chuck Ealey's Canadian Football League rights to Winnipeg Blue Bombers this week, the veteran quarterback cried foul.

The Argos, who turned Ealey loose in 1978 after some dismal seasons with him calling the plays, had the 29-year-old signal-caller in camp on a five-day trial after starter Tony Adams was injured.

But Adams's quick recovery means he'll start against Saskatchewan Roughriders at tonight and head-coach Forrest Gregg decided to keep Mark Jackson in a backup role.

Gregg, however, kept Ealey on Toronto's negotiation list until the last possible moment without signing him.

Officially the Argos decided not to activate Ealey, but general-manager Tom Hudspeth informed the player Monday that he was headed back to Winnipeg, a team that previously found him expendable.

Ealey said more than no.

"Hudspeth said Argos had traded my CFL rights to Winnipeg and I replied the club didn't have my rights to trade," Ealey said Tuesday.

"I asked to be released as a free agent. . . . Hudspeth said the deal with Winnipeg had already been made and I felt the club was only trying to help itself."

Ealey called on CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur to intervene.

"He ruled that I was a free agent as of 4 p.m. (Monday) and Argos had no right to trade me," Ealey said.

Ealey, who came to the CFL out of Miami of Ohio with great passing credentials and led Hamilton Tiger-Cats to the 1972 Grey Cup championship in his rookie year, said he would not return to the Western Conference under any conditions.

"I'll wait a while and see what happens," Ealey said. "But I'm not going to jump at another offer of a five-day trial without some assurances. I don't intend to go bumming around the league."

Troubled Northlands has to satisfy riders

EDMONTON (CP) — Northlands racing officials have expressed confidence that for the second time this year they will avert a major strike.

"We are doing what the jockeys have asked for," racing-manager Morris Taylor said Monday.

"The work in the jocks' room is starting after lunch and I think that riders will be accepting mounts when the entries for Thursday's card are asked for."

Gerry Rasmussen, area manager of the Jockeys Benefit Association, and veteran-rider Rick Hedge said Saturday that they would not accept mounts if their requests for improved contitions in the jockeys' room were not heeded.

Earlier in the meet, Northlands lost a day of racing when the horsemen stuck for 24 hours to bolster their demands for better stabling. But the dispute was quickly over and a three-man committee was named.

Rautins off to N.Y.

TORONTO (CP) — Basketball star Leo Rautins of Toronto said Tuesday he will enter Syracuse University this fall instead of Marshall University.

Rautins, a high-scoring member of Canada's national basketball team, was among a handful of athletes and coaches on hand for a press reception held Tuesday to announce plans for Canada's participation in the World Student Games next month in Mexico.

Rautins will be with the national team in Mexico before heading for Syracuse.

Rautins started his college basketball career last year at Minnesota but this year announced he would not return to the Big Ten school. Later, he was recruited by Marshall coach Stu Aberdeen but his status became uncertain when Aberdeen died suddenly in June.

Because of his transfer, National Collegiate Athletic Association eligibility rules require Rautins to sit out the 1979-80 basketball season. He could resume playing the following season and he said Tuesday a career in the National Basketball Association remains his prime goal.

Now, the world's most popular microcomputer is more affordable than ever!

Provincial court

One of three youths jointly charged with robbery with threats of violence was denied bail Tuesday by Judge Fred Giles in Victoria provincial court.

Ordered detained in custody was 18-year-old Ronald Hamer, of 1119 McBrier. Nineteen-year-olds Keith McKenzie, of 1340 Sussex, and Alan Peirson, of 3249 Doncaster, were released on their own recognizance.

They were charged in connection with an incident shortly after midnight Monday in which a man was robbed of $60 in the 1300 block Government.

All three were remanded until Thursday for election of their trial method.

A 44-YEAR-OLD inmate of Snowden River prison camp near Campbell River was given an additional two months in jail after pleading guilty to being unlawfully at large for 16 days last month.

Crown counsel Richard Law told the court Ronald Charles Woods was on a temporary absence pass from the forestry camp on July 7 but failed to turn up at a gas station where he was to be picked up for a ride back. Woods turned himself in at Wilkinson Road jail in Saanich on July 23.

He was serving a sentence of two years less a day imposed Jan. 16 this year in Victoria for robbery and theft under $200.

Woods said he phoned July 7 and told authorities he was having trouble making it back to the camp and requested they get him. He said he waited an hour and a half before deciding to go down to Victoria because he "had something to do."

Sharon Darlene Hansen, 37, of 2605 Blanshard, is charged with causing bodily harm with intent to wound, maim or disfigure as well as attempted murder in connection with an Aug. 4 incident.

She was released on her own recognizance in the sum of $5,000, and one of the conditions was that she reside at the Eric Martin Institute while on bail.

A trial date of Sept. 13 was set by Giles.

JUDGE BLAKE ALLAN imposed an 18-month jail sentence on a 26-year-old man who was found guilty of indecently assaulting a 15-year-old girl July 6.

Russell Michael Amos, of 485 Island Highway, was also placed on two years' probation.

He was convicted of attacking the young girl, who was intoxicated to the point of unconsciousness, in bushes at Centennial Square.

A 35-YEAR-OLD Sidney man was given 30 days after conviction on a charge of resisting a peace officer in the execution of his duties.

Stanley Arthur Belcourt, of 9724 Fourth Street, had also been charged with assaulting Constable Burt Allison of the Sidney RCMP outside the Golden Bear Tavern, 2280 Beacon Avenue, on Jan. 13, but Allan found him not guilty on that count.

Allison's testimony was that Belcourt came out of the pub with two full glasses of beer and, when told to empty the glass on the ground, poured out the beer and then smashed the glasses on the pavement. The officer said he then arrested Belcourt for being intoxicated in a public place and, as he was about to place him in the police vehicle, was struck on the side of his head by Belcourt.

Belcourt, who had previous convictions for impaired driving, failing to remain at the scene of an accident, refusing a breath test demand, theft, attempted theft, manslaughter, causing a disturbance, resisting arrest, wilful damage, and assault causing bodily harm, testified he remembered events vaguely owing to intoxication, but accused police of beating him in the detachment parking lot.

A 30-DAY sentence was imposed on 32-year-old Donald Stanley McNabb of 1434 Vining.

The dangerous driving charge involved an accident at Springfield and Wilson, in which a witness told police McNabb was going about 80 kmh in a 50-kmh zone, went out of control after going over railway tracks, and hit a parked car.

The other charge also involved an accident, Law said.

McNabb had a previous conviction for impaired driving, on Aug. 26, 1977, when he was fined $500.

McNabb said he was an unemployed father of three on unemployment insurance benefits and unable to pay a fine.

FINED $250 for having care and control of a vehicle while having a blood-alcohol reading over .08 was 20-year-old Maurice Coderre of 441 Vincent.

Doctors' war centred in B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Angry denunciations are flying between two camps of B.C. doctors warring over whether a conservative or militant reformer will represent them as president of the Canadian Medical Association.

The reform group is pushing for "patient participation" (payments by patients in addition to that provided by government health care).

In the process, more than harsh words are being traded. Dr. Peter Banks of Victoria, a prominent spokesman for the conservatives, said he recently received from an anonymous colleague an envelope that contained a rubber finger sheath used in rectal examinations stuffed with human feces.

The dispute centres around the B.C. Medical Association's nomination for president of the national association, a prerogative that comes with the province's turn to act as host for the 1980 national convention.

PHYSICIAN, HEAL THAT FOREST FIRE

Railway workers and physicians are just like anyone else when it comes to fighting forest fires, according to Langford forest ranger Bruce Holloway.

The Colonist reported Sunday that forest service officers can conscript the services of anyone between the ages of 18 and 80 to fight a forest fire, except that physicians, some railway personnel, the physically unfit and some others were excluded.

That, Holloway says, was in an old version of the Forest Act. The new act excludes only the physically unfit, and those under 19, and reads in Section 124(1): "Where ordered to do so by a regional manager, a forest officer authorized by him, or a peace officer, (a) a person shall provide appropriate equipment he owns or has the use of, and (b) a person who is 19 or older and fit to do so, shall assist in controlling and extinguishing a forest fire."

The exceptions listed in the previous Forest Act have been eliminated in the new version.

Woodworkers out

Pickets block Interior mills

The action followed an adjournment in talks to Friday between the North Cariboo Forest Relations Association and negotiators for 5,000 northern Interior woodworkers.

Pickets were up at the Canim Lake sawmill northwest of 100 Mile House and at the Pinette and Therrien mill and the West Fraser Planer operation, both in Williams Lake.

In addition, the Ainsworth Lumber mill in Lone Butte near 100 Mile House was behind a picket line as was 100 Mile Cedar Products.

Martin McLeod, a spokesman for Canim Lake sawmill, said pickets at that operation were not set up by the 500 union members employed at the mill.

He said the pickets are members of the International Woodworkers of America from a nearby mill. The Canim Lake mill, owned by Weldwood Canada, negotiates separately with the industry.

The northern Interior contract with the IWA expires Aug. 30. The union has said it has been offered only portions of an agreement signed recently by coastal and southern Interior members.

About 38,000 coast and southern Interior woodworkers approved a two-year agreement last month that provided an increase of 90 cents an hour in the first year and an increase of 9.5 per cent or 90 cents an hour, whichever is greater, in the second. The old base rate was $8.16 an hour.

Busless Ottawa working

OTTAWA (UPC) — A strike by more than 1,500 Ottawa bus drivers and maintenance staff entered its second day Tuesday, causing the city's 140,000 commuters to car pool, walk or bicycle to work.

Both members of the Amalgamated Transit Union and the employer, OC Transpo, remained deadlocked in negotiations that concern distribution of a 16.5-per cent wage increase over a two-year contract.

Despite the strike, the approximately 80,000 employees of the federal government made it to work Tuesday. Last week, the government warned workers they would have to get to work — strike or no strike.

The drivers are demanding the wage increases be distributed in two stages — 8.0 percent to be paid retroactive to Jan. 1, 1979 and 8.5 percent due next Jan. 1.

But Ottawa Mayor Marion Dewar and regional chairman Andy Haydon said the city prevers to spread the increases in four stages.

They're not convinced IT is something else

Statistics Canada employee examines sculpture for clues: is it genitalia or a bean sprout?

OTTAWA (CP) — An hour-long discussion on modern art Tuesday couldn't persuade Statistics Canada employees that a wall sculpture in their building is anything other than a portrayal of a woman's breasts and genitalia.

"It's very sexually explicit and as a woman I take great offence to it," one employee told Christopher Youngs, director of the federal government's Art Bank, after his talk on the meaning of the Walter Redinger sculpture.

"To walk in in the morning and have to face something that fills me with revulsion is not a nice way to start the day," added another woman. A few cries of "philistine" punctuated the applause that greeted her remarks.

Youngs was invited to give the lunch-hour seminar, attended by about 200 public servants, because of the controversy surrounding the $14,000 sculpture installed in Statistics Canada's headquarters last week.

Seeing the orange fiberglass sculpture as women's breasts and genitalia was a misinterpretation and "a perversion of the artist's intentions," Youngs said.

The abstract form involved organic elements struggling against the surface in a geometric format, Youngs said. The artist told him the idea was germination: "If it was on the floor, it would be a seed sprouting."

Youngs said he was not discouraged by the audience's reaction. "I came here not to preach, but to listen," he said. "I don't think we can cram culture down people's throats," he added.

Youngs said any decision to remove the sculpture would have to be made by Statistics Canada.

Hans Adler, a statistician and modern art collector who organized the seminar, said it was unlikely the sculpture would be removed.

"The problem now is we can't win," Adler said. "If we take it down now we'll be accused of censorship."

Most of the lunch-hour crowd seemed to share the sentiments of Dorothy Lloyd, who has collected 500 signatures on a petition to have the piece removed.

But one young man, supported by a vocal minority, said he found nothing offensive about the sculpture. "I think it looks like butterscotch pudding on the boil," he said.

Police strike averted in Saskatoon

SASKATOON (CP) — A strike by the 262 policemen in Saskatoon was averted late Tuesday — at least for the time being — when negotiators for the Saskatoon Police Asssociation reached a momorandum of agreement with the city.

Details of the agreement, reached after more than five hours of negotiations with conciliator Ron Duncan attending, were not released pending a ratification vote by the policemen. A date for the ratification vote has not been set.

The policemen voted during the weekend in favor of striking if their contract dispute with the city could not be resolved.

Before the agreement was reached, security firms had reported an unprecedented demand for their services and some businessmen were talking about using guard dogs and boarding their windows.

"I saw on the news what happened in Bathurst, N.B., (scene of a recent police strike)," said Kerry Higgins, owner of a gun shop.

"I wouldn't be naive enough to think it couldn't happen in Saskatoon."

He said he thought theft of several handguns from his store last week was a sign of someone preparing for a police strike.

He said he might hire a guard, leave his Doberman pinscher in the building overnight, or stay himself.

Association President Vic Hein said members would respond only to emergencies if there was a strike.

"First attention would be to the protection of life and limb, and secondly property."

There would be no regular patrols, but officers would man telephones and testify in court as usual.

Businessmen and others have been calling Metropolitan Investigation and Security (Canada) Ltd. since Friday noon, according to Chuck Marchildon, northern Saskatchewan operations manager.

Second daily gives up

WHITEHORSE, YUKON (CP) — The Northern Times, which went into direct competition with the long-established Whitehorse Star in July, 1978, printed its last issue Monday, 271 issues after it started publishing.

Managing editor Paul Koring, 25, said Whitehorse —population 17,000—was too small to support two dailies. The more solidly established Star, which has been publishing since 1908, survived the competition for advertising revenue and is now the sole daily in the city.

Novelist J.G. Farrell swept to death at sea

NAMES in the NEWS

Novelist J. G. Farrell was presumed dead after being swept out to sea Tuesday while fishing near his home on Bantry Bay, in southwest Ireland. Farrell, 44, returned to Ireland in March after living in London for 10 years. The coast guard said a tourist family reported seeing him collapse and fall from the rocks into the sea below his farmhouse on Sheep's Head Peninsula.

John Stonehouse, 54, a former British cabinet minister who faked his own drowning off Miami five years ago, was freed from jail in London Tuesday after serving three years for theft, fraud and deception. In jail, Stonehouse suffered three heart attacks and underwent a major operation to bypass blocked arteries.

Dorothy Hart, a movie and TV actress of the 1940s and 1950s, has filed a $60-million suit in New York against Tower Publications as publishers of The Editor, a book that allegedly describes her as a "sex machine." She charges the publishers with libel, invasion of privacy and conspiracy to avoid liability by using pseudonyms and paper corporations.

To get Erik Estrada into "every episode we make" of the CHiPs television series, the producers will film him as he recuperates from a motorcycle accident in the Medical Center of the University of California at Los Angeles. "There were some early reports that we were going to use the footage of his accident on television," said Cy Chermak, executive producer of the series. "We're not going to do that. We're going to create a fictional, dramatized version of an accident using a stand-in."

Obafemi Awolowo appeared to be the leader Tuesday but still faced the possibility of a run-off vote following Saturday's presidential election, the final stage in Nigeria's return to democracy after 13 years of military rule.

Norfolk, Virginia, Judge Vernon Hitchings has apologized in person and by letter to Rabbi Joseph Sackett, following an incident in which the judge told the rabbi: "Take off your hat in my courtroom." The hat in question was a yarmulke, and Rabbi Sackett, an Orthodox Jew who was in court to challenge a traffic ticket, did as he was ordered.

HOLDS DENTURES FIRM WITHOUT DAILY "FIXINGS"

Snug Cushions hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks

No more "fixings" every morning with messy powders or creams. Even if dentures need "fixing" after every meal, here's important news. Snug cushions restore dentures' holding power so dentures stay comfortably tight for weeks. Snug, the soft, effective temporary aid, forms a "comfort bond" between dentures and gums. Sticks to dentures, not to gums. Rinse, scrub or soak Snug fresh and clean. Easy to remove, but won't wash off or flake away. So, end daily "fixings"! Use Snug to hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks.

Commando-style anti-nuclear raids feared

CIA story irks Pakistan

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — The foreign office summoned U.S. Ambassador Arthur Hummel, Jr., Tuesday to question him about a news report that American officials were considering covert action to prevent Pakistan from developing nuclear weapons.

Pakistani government officials said the foreign office told Hummel it was "seriously concerned" over the report Sunday in The New York Times.

Pakistan "deeply regrets that an ally and a traditional friend should be considering a course of action the consequences of which for the peace and stability of the region could be incalculable," one official said.

The Times report quoted state department officials as saying Pakistan was on the verge of developing an atomic bomb and had spurned several pleas not to do so.

Pakistan's adversary, India, has already conducted nuclear bomb tests. If Pakistan attains nuclear capability, it could prompt India to revive its nuclear weapons program and—in the worst case—lead to a nuclear war between the two enemies, the officials were quoted as saying.

The report said administration officials were considering three options—offers of sophisticated but conventional military aid to Pakistan if it agreed to give up the nuclear option, economic sanctions, or, as a last resort, covert action to sabotage Pakistan's nuclear facilities.

Unconvinced by a state department denial of the report, the Pakistani foreign office summoned Hummel.

But government officials said they remained unconvinced after the talk with him. They said he repeated the state department's denial, and "it referred only to covert action.

"It did not rule out the possibility of action by paramilitary forces . . . which would amount to outright aggression," the officials said.

Pakistan has repeatedly denied that its nuclear program is aimed at making nuclear weapons. But it has refused to renounce the nuclear option or accept international safeguards on Pakistani nuclear facilities.

DEFENCE KEEPS EYE ON IRANIAN FIGHTER

F-14

McKinnon
. . . looks again

F-14s have new appeal

OTTAWA (CP) — Cabinet is not expected to select the new fighter aircraft until October at the earliest with the fleet of used F-14s still a dark-horse contender.

Renewed interest in the Grumman F-14s coupled with cabinet's preoccupation with economic issues and a new parliamentary session virtually ensures there will be no decision on the $2.6-billion fighter contract for many weeks. The government proposals have yet to reach cabinet.

The cabinet has until Dec. 31 to sign a contract with either of the two finalists — McDonnell Douglas and General Dynamics — under current terms. If that date slips by, the government may have to renegotiate contract clauses, including price.

But Defence Minister Allan McKinnon says he is again looking at the second-hand F-14s, purchased from the U.S. by the former regime in Iran. The Liberal cabinet rejected the F-14 last year and named the McDonnell Douglas F-18A and the General Dynamics F-16 as final contenders.

McKinnon indicated during the federal election campaign he would like to buy the 78 Iranian-owned F-14s because he heard they were for sale. Those hopes faded early this summer but recently revived with news the United States is trying to buy them back.

"I don't think there is a very good chance of the deal going through, but I wouldn't want to pass up the opportunity," McKinnon said Tuesday.

But the F-14 deal may take time to settle while Ottawa waits for the United States to buy the fighters back from Iran.

McKinnon has said the F-14 would be used in North America while the government would buy another fighter for Canadian forces in Europe.

McKinnon rejected New Democratic MP Terry Sargeant's request for a freeze on major defence projects such as the fighter contract.

Break in gas pipe sparks evacuation

CALGARY (CP) — Buildings containing hundreds of people were evacuated in downtown Calgary Tuesday as gas roared from a broken pipline. But there were no injuries and no explosion as a result of the construction accident.

A spokesmen for the pipeline company, Canadian Western Natural Gas Ltd., said later that there was no danger of a massive explosion because the ratio of gas to air was not high enough.

"It wouldn't explode because it wouldn't have the proper mix—it would just be a nice big flame."

Unlike heavier gases such as propane, the natural gas in the 10-centimetre-diameter pipeline is lighter then air, and "with a good breeze it was moving up," they said.

The gas, however, was drifting into nearby apartment buildings and offices and could have built up into dangerous concentrations there, so firemen and police went through a six-block area warning people to leave.

"It could have been dangerous," the Canadian Western spokesmen said. "We don't like to take any chances."

Electric power was cut off over most of the downtown area at the fire department's request, and unshielded lights were turned off as a precaution.

Traffic was diverted around the area, causing traffic jams.

About an hour after the pipeline was broken, the escaping gas was halted. Within two hours, activity was back to normal at the many nearby construction sites, and traffic was moving past the accident site.

Ontario tune-ups fail exhaust test

OTTAWA (CP) — Verbal abuse is being hurled at area auto mechanics as tests show many cars with recent tune-ups are failing to meet new Ontario exhaust emission standards.

Syd Newdick, senior automotive inspector for the transport ministry's air resources branch, said about 65 per cent of mechanics failed tune-up tests.

"The main problem is that most do not use an exhaust analyser."

Tories re-examine unity of armed forces

WINNIPEG (CP) — Defence Minister Allan McKinnon said here that a commission examining the integration of Canada's armed forces should be ready to start work by Sept. 1.

McKinnon said the Progressive Conservative government is not at all committed to the integration policy introduced 11 years ago by the previous Liberal government.

McKinnon said the government expects to announce names of the five commissioners soon. Four persons have agreed to serve and talks are continuing with a fifth person.

"They're being charged with determining what the merits and demerits of unification are and recommending what I should do about it," McKinnon told a news conference.

He said the commissioners might recommend that Canada revert to three separate armed forces, say with the present system or "have something half-way between."

The commission is to hold a series of meetings starting in September and ending by Jan. 31, 1980, said the minister.

High-flying boozers plaguing European airlines

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Hard drinking by airline passengers who swig from duty-free liquor bottles or guzzle cheap cocktails is causing nightmares aloft for crews on international flights, West German pilots say.

"Not a month goes by without crews being confronted with alcohol cases," Captain Viktor Jauernig, chief of Lufthansa airline's pilot association, said in an interview in Der Spiegel magazine. "We have to see what can be done to keep this problem in grip."

THE MAGAZINE TOLD OF increasing cases of drunkenness and rowdy behavior by passengers emboldened by cut-rate drinks or beer sold aboard international airliners or tippling from bottles bought at tax-free airport shops.

"What's typical for excursion boats has become normal in air travel: boozing on board," Der Spiegel said. "Lufthansa pilots recognize veritable terror routes.

"Especially on the long routes, passengers drink as if it were their last bottle," it quoted a Lufthansa stewardess as saying. One drunk had to be tied to his seat on the Hong Kong-to-Frankfurt run when he got out of hand.

GERMAN TOURISTS HEADED for Bangkok or returning from the Mediterranean, English soccer fans flying to matches on the Continent and Scandinavians on all routes were singled out as the biggest troublemakers.

Three other Western European airlines queried by The Associated Press — Air France, Alitalia and SAS — played down the problem, but Swissair and British Airways acknowledged drinking passengers have been disruptive.

"We all have the same problems," said Sigrid Votteler, a Lufthansa official. "Why deny it?"

LUFTHANSA AND MOST OTHER airlines bar persons from boarding who are obviously drunk, and stewardesses have orders to stop serving alcoholic beverages to persons who become intoxicated in flight, she said.

"But when a passenger brings his own bottle on board and guzzles from that, there's little we can do," Ms. Votteler said. "You can't take it away from him.

"We would like to see the duty-free shops at the end of the flights, rather than at the start. But this is not our decision and we have no influence."

BILL STEVENS OF BRITISH Airways said British crews are more likely to run into trouble from passengers wanting more to drink than from travellers who drink too much.

"The chances of getting pie-eyed on our flights are pretty remote," he said. "We're limited in the amount of drink we can carry, particularly on our jumbo flights with 300 to 350 people on board."

FOR NANCY IT'S ALWAYS DINNER FOR ONE

Age no barrier against touch of loneliness

I am alone,
Hiding in my room,
Deep within my womb,
I touch no one
And no one touches me.
—Simon and Garfunkel,
I Am a Rock.

By NOLAN DAVIS
Colonist-Copley Service

Her name is Nancy, she is only 24, and she hardly looks like someone who is lonely.

And yet she is.

"I haven't been to a play in ages. I don't go to movies. I don't go out dancing. I can't tell you the last time I went to a bar for a drink. I sit at home a lot wondering how come nobody calls me," says Nancy.

"I don't know what to do. You can only watch so much TV, you know. You can only re-hem your jeans so many times. It's just hard.

"I KEEP trying to figure out what I'm doing watching Mork and Mindy by myself when I should be out doing something.

"I don't know what to do. I've been thinking about packing it up and leaving. I've been in the city too long."

Nancy is among a burgeoning number of despairing Americans who are experiencing what one expert calls the "frightening aspect of feeling separated from other human beings."

EVERYONE knows something about loneliness. But more and more people, sociologists say, are coming to know what may be called the outer limit of this psychological state.

Its limited border tragedy.

Loneliness, most observers say, is merely a state of mind, a level of consciousness. But if someone believes he's lonely, he (or she) usually is. The belief becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy: The believer begins to act in ways which will guarantee his loneliness.

LONELINESS is not a new phenomenon. From Greek mythology (Prometheus Unchained) through modern literature (the mute war ragamuffin in Jerzy Kosinski's The Painted Bird), it has been symbolized in myriad ways. One of the best-known examples comes from the Christian Bible — embodied in Jesus' cry from the isolation of the cross: "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken me?"

THAT IS the final loneliness, the transition into Ginnungigap — the void.

The post-natal discovery by the infant of its differentiation from its mother-host is yet another loneliness, the experts say. Thus, they conclude, most adult human beings — and nearly every child — at one time or another feels forsaken.

Between birth and death come the lesser lonelinesses. Reacting to these, the experts say, the lonely resort to diverse strategies: Immersion in music or television, hobbies, studies, the care and feeding of domestic pets.

THE EXCHANGE of companionship between man and animal is primordial — and, therefore, satisfying. Animals, especially for the very old, are among the greatest comforts against the unsympathetic, urban monstrosities which pass for modern cities.

There are also negative strategies: cultism, fanaticism, exhibitionism.

The exhibitionist flasher is a case in point. He was lonely, too.

"HE WAS just young," Nancy recalls. "I thought he was good-looking. He offered me a ride and I said no, I was only half a block from home. And then I really looked. And I got mad.

"He was just, (she whispers now) . . . he was sitting in his car . . . with his jeans down to about his knees."

Noted clinical psychologist James A. Howard, an expert on loneliness, says Nancy and the flasher may not be so far apart. But their strategies are different.

"MY HUNCH is that this young woman is an 'incorporator'," Howard says. "Incorporators need to belong, need the feedback that other people are receptive to them."

"While she is incorporating everything, drawing back, the flasher is saying: 'Hey. Can you accept me? Can anybody accept me?' He needs a shock reaction on the part of others to, in a sense, indicate that the message not only is getting through but is producing an effect. Then he can say: 'I'm not powerless in my cage'."

HOWARD'S reference to a "cage" of loneliness is from the title of his book The Flesh-Colored Cage, a theoretical look at loneliness, supported by clinical observations. Howard is on the staff of the Douglas Young Clinic in Kearny Mesa, Calif.

Asked if there is a solution to loneliness, Howard answers: "There ain't none. You can get only a partial answer for loneliness by the activities or strategies you employ. You can always win the battle, but you can never win the war."

LIKE OTHER experts on the subject, he says the best thing a lonely person can do is make friends, get involved with other people or with positive, communicative expressions to others. Man is a social being.

Chronically lonely people are advised to seek professional help. Social workers, religious and family counsellors — and especially psychologists and psychiatrists — are experienced in analyzing loneliness.

MOST OF THE lonely people they see are elderly. Not that the elderly are the loneliest people in the world.

Observers say that is a myth. There are, after all, more young people alive today than elderly. It's just that the young are more embarrassed to admit a lack of friends. One university counsellor suggests that's because they may not understand the difference between true friends and mere drinking or party-going associates.

Few young people are as courageous as Nancy, who tends to accurately describe her state. Because of her honesty, the roots of Nancy's loneliness are clear. This gives her an excellent opportunity of lessening, if not eliminating, her problems.

THE BASIS of Nancy's feeling of loneliness, Howard says, is that she thinks she's fat.

(Says Nancy, "By the time I was 18, I weighed 197 pounds. There just aren't too many guys that are attracted to 'humungous' ladies.")

"Part of what she took in, as well as food," says Howard, "was a negative concept of herself."

While still in high school, Nancy confides, she tried to commit suicide by sniffing chloroform. After graduation, she took off for Canada, where an irresponsible young lover eventually deserted her. Returning home and later coming to San Diego with her brother (who got married and moved away), she saw two other lovers leave her. The last one, however, encouraged her to lose weight while he was with her. She lost 70 pounds.

"BUT I constantly feel fat," she says. "I know I'm not. I sometimes feel like I look good. And sometimes I just feel like I don't. And I think when I feel like I don't, other people can tell that."

"While her wall of fat was probably a security blanket," Howard says, "she nonetheless put herself partly behind the eight ball because she could not accept her slender self as being what she really is.

"Without the wall to retreat behind, she might then have to reach out for some people for herself to reduce her loneliness to a tolerable level."

For others, the struggle is far greater. The terror can be terminal.

"If the state of loneliness is prolonged," says Dr. Ben Lazare Mijuskovic, "it can lead to disastrous consequences — early death and heart attack. This has been documented in the book, The Broken Heart, by James Lynch.

"Sometimes people are so anxious to escape their loneliness that they join group activities that are detrimental to society like terrorism, fanaticism — a cult such as the People's Temple thing — which allows them to lose themselves in a larger group.

"It's fine and necessary to fuse or unite with others, but the trick is to hold on to one's identity. There's nothing wrong with belonging to a church or family, but not if it denies the maintenance of self."

Careers start on home base

MONTREAL (CP) — A growing number of city women are using their homes as business centres, attempting to combine family life and career.

But it's not always a matter of economics; in most cases their husbands bring home more than adequate salaries.

For many women, the home is a middle ground where they can benefit from a sense of self-achievement without abandoning the traditional role of wife and mother.

In Norene Gilletz's case, it began with her reputation as an excellent cook. Friends and neighbors began asking her for cooking tips.

She now holds cooking classes in a special demonstration kitchen she had installed in her basement. And her once-small utensil sideline has blossomed into a full-fledged kitchen shop, stocked with everything from mixing bowls to linens, jams, spices and teas.

Eventually Mrs. Gilletz hopes to open a store, perhaps in a local shopping centre. But while she's still learning the ground rules, her home locale offers her a saving of more than $1,000 a month in rent.

Phyllis Levitt, a 57-year-old grandmother, began her home-based party planning business 12 years ago after she organized a friend's wedding.

That affair was a success, and it led to assignments for every type of party from bar mitzvahs and fashion shows to simply having the boss for dinner.

Her services include everything from designing invitations to renting theatre props.

The grapevine brings Mrs. Levitt all the customers she wants, "maybe even more," she says.

"In the past few years, I've become very selective."

Classic idea for fresh peach

It's getting into late summer and peaches are in season. Nothing is more satisfying than biting into a fresh, juicy peach. The peach is low in calories and high in Vitamin A, Vitamin C, potassium and other minerals. A good-looking, ripe peach should have a deep yellow or creamy yellow background, and be firm or slightly soft to touch. Once ripe, peaches should be refrigerated to maintain freshness.

A classic dessert is fresh peach pie. Made from fresh peaches, the generous juices released during cooking can be thickened with corn starch. Simply toss the raw fruit with sugar mixed with corn starch and the filling will thicken while cooking, without hiding the flavor or altering the color. Everyone will enjoy being served this delicious pie on a balmy August evening.

For year-round enjoyment, peaches can successfully be transformed into jams, jellies and conserves. Spiced peach freezer jam is an easy to make, fresh tasting jam that holds the special flavor of fresh, ripe fruit. The peaches are not cooked, thus saving time and energy. Most important is the use of the 2 ounce package of powdered jam and jelly pectin. The corn syrup prevents total crystallization of the sugar and therefore promotes a smooth consistency. This jam is easily stored in the freezer and transferred to the refrigerator as needed.

Fresh Peach Lattice Pie

1 recipe Double Crust Pastry for 9-inch pie
⅔ cup sugar
2 tablespoons corn starch
5 cups sliced peeled ripe peaches (about 9 medium)
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon margarine

Mix together sugar and cornstarch; sprinkle over peaches. Add lemon juice and toss until well-coated. Line 9-inch pie plate with one half pastry allowing 1 inch to overhang. Fill shell with peach mixture and dot with margarine. Roll remaining pastry into 12-inch circle. Cut into 10 (½-inch) strips with pastry wheel or knife. Place 5 of the strips across filling. Weave lattice crust with remaining strips by folding back alternate strips as each cross strip is added. Fold trimmed edge of lower crust over ends of strips; seal and flute. Cover fluted edge with strips of foil; remove during last 15 minutes if more browning is desired. Bake in 425°F oven 55 minutes or until lattice top is golden brown. Makes 1 (9-inch) pie.

Spiced Peach-Freezer Jam

10-12 fully ripe peaches
¼ cup lemon juice
½ teaspoon ground ginger
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
1 package (2-ounce) powdered jam and jelly pectin
1 cup corn syrup
4½ cups sugar

Rinse, peel, pit and fully crush peaches. Measure 3¼ cups. In large bowl or saucepan, stir together peaches and lemon juice. Add ginger and nutmeg; mix well. Slowly sift in jam and jelly pectin, stirring vigorously. Set aside 30 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add corn syrup, stirring well. Gradually stir in sugar. To hasten sugar dissolving, jam mixture may be heated very slightly, but do not heat to more than 100°F (lukewarm). Ladle into washed and scalded ½ to 1-pint freezer containers leaving ½-inch headspace. Cover at once with tight lids (no parrafin needed). Label all containers. Store in freezer and transfer to refrigerator as needed. Makes 7 (½-pint) containers.

Top chef in tune

MONTREAL (CP) — Mario Novati, an Italian-born chef and manager at McGill University's Faculty Club, plans to publish a national weekly culinary magazine beginning in September.

Novati, who has made a 30-year career of fanning the flames of Canadian interest in gastronomy, plans to offer a different cuisine each week, starting with an issue devoted to international recipes and wines.

"Everything will be in tune to what's new in cuisine," Novati said in a recent interview.

The magazine, entitled Chef Novati, will include a menu with seven or more recipes from his personal collection.

"Recipes are a sickness with me," he says. "I don't know how many I have."

Male shopper charms seller

LONDON (AP) — Sorry, Madam, but the saleslady who serves you in your local store would much rather deal with a man — at least he smiles and doesn't fuss when he's making a purchase.

A survey of shop assistants published Monday says women are rude, impatient and demanding. They won't take advice, and don't even know what they want.

Men, on the other hand, say "thank you" more often than women, argue less and aren't so impatient.

The survey, of 1,000 sales clerks in big department stores in London and two of Britain's biggest provincial cities, Birmingham and Manchester, was conducted by City Industrial, a company that outfits shops. All those questioned were women.

Eighty per cent of the clerks said women make the worst customers, 12 per cent said men make the worst customer and eight per cent saw no difference. Furthermore, the survery said, the older the woman customer, the worse she is.

Puberty end of life

NEW YORK (UPI) — Researchers have completed a study of life expectancies in a stone age community in Southern California and concluded that its members qualified as senior citizens at puberty.

The joint study of the La Jolla culture, which existed on the California coast from about 4500 to 1000 B.C., was conducted by scientists from Columbia University in New York and the University of San Diego who reported that life expectancies in the primitive society were 16 to 17 years.

A statement released by Columbia said the population was the oldest in the Western Hemisphere for which an estimate of life expectancy has been possible.

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: You shouldn't be writing an advice column — you should be locked up. You're a dangerous person. When you encouraged that 17-year-old girl to have her nose made smaller, I almost popped an artery. Don't you realize people can die from even the simplest operation?

Women have gone berserk. If they are too fat and hate diet and exercise, they hire a surgeon to slice the fat off their hips, thighs, rear ends — whereever. If they can't see and are too vain to wear glasses, they stick plastic lenses over their eyeballs. (I can't count the times I'd seen adults crawling on the floor looking for the dammned things.

My wife's sister was flat-chested, so she paid a doctor to pump her up with silicone. All of a sudden she looked like Dolly Parton. It was the talk of the town.

People like you don't help bring sanity to an already half-crazy world. Instead of telling that 17-year-old girl to get her nose bobbed, why didn't you tell her that anybody who would let the size of a nose stand in the way of a friendship isn't worth knowing? — No Fan Of Yours

Dear No Fan: It's how a person feels about him or herself that counts. If a 17-year-old hates her nose, thinks it makes her look like a witch (her description), and has saved money for three years to have it altered, who am I to tell her not to do it?

Many years ago people had to go with what the good Lord gave them. Today they have choices. Surgeons can uncross eyes, reshape noses and remove unsightly scars from accidents or acne. I'm in favor of anything that improves self-esteem. If surgery can of it, that's the way to go.

Dear Ann Landers: My parents came from Norway. They were never very demonstrative, but I know they loved all their children.

I married an Italian. His parents kiss "hello," "goodbye" and in-between. I had a hard time getting used to it when I married Tony.

Our son was born in December, my husband kisses the child from morning till night. Today there is a lot of talk about gay people. I worry that Tony might turn our child into a homosexual. Should I say something to him?—Helga

Dear Helga: Homosexuality is not caused by fathers kissing their sons. You should be thrilled that Tony feels so warmly toward the child. Count your blessings, honey.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband passed away in April. He was a wonderful man and I miss him terribly.

For the first three weeks the house was filled with visitors. They were so attentive and thoughtful. Many of them said, "If you need anything plese call me." This is what I'm writing about, Ann.

Don't they realize I won't call them and invite myself to dinner or to a picnic or a movie? But I'd love it if THEY would invite me. Please tell them so. I'm — Too Proud

Dear Friend: I did it. And I hope your letter will move a few thousand well-intentioned friends toward the phone. Thanks for the reminder.

Doctors to elevate girl athlete

Colonist-New York Times Service

NEW YORK — When the 24,000-member American Academy of Pediatrics holds its annual meeting in San Francisco next October, a seminar on The Girl Athlete will be on the agenda for the first time in the organization's 49-year history.

"This, you might say, is by popular demand," explained Dr. Elizabeth Coryllos of Glen Head, N.Y., the pediatric surgeon who will lead the seminar. "The girl athlete has become a very real entity and a practical concern to the practicing pediatrician."

"Before now, it didn't matter — what little is known was all about the boys," she continued. "They found this big gap. That's why they decided this year to have one of the seminars devoted completely to the female athlete, in order, you might say, to get an information flow going so that the everyday pediatrician — the one who is going to see these kids first — would get a chance to learn something and not feel completely at a loss."

The seminar will deal not only with such matters as physiology and treatment but also with sports and the handicapped girl and the psychological impact of sports on girls.

Despite the publicity accorded to girls playing on boys' football teams and girls breaking into Little League lineups, Dr. Coryllos said: "Talking to the children I find there are some girls who may want to be on the boys' team just because it is a challenge. I find in the great majority of cases, the girls are happier or just as happy on their own, as long as they have equal facilities and equipment."

Dr. Coryllos had hoped that Dr. Regina Gluck of Old Westbury, N.Y., a pediatric cardiologist, would be joining her in the seminar during the Oct. 13-to-18 convention along with the former Olympic ice skating champion Tenley Albright, who is now a surgeon. But Dr. Gluck was lured away by an invitation from Chinese medical authorities to visit China, and Dr. Albright decided she could not bear to miss watching two of her three daughters — Elin, 12, and Elee, 8 — in a skating competition whose dates conflict with the convention.

Dr. Albright, who is an officer of the United States Olympic Committee and who takes part frequently in sports symposiums, thinks that some parents are so anxious not to push their children into sports that they end up doing just the reverse. "When a child begins to show an interest and wants our encouragement," she said, "I feel it's vital to give it because they learn so much about everything through sport. It's wonderful training for anything they do for the rest of their life — organization, discipline and just plain having fun."

Dr. Albright said more girls with althetic injuries were being seen by doctors these days, but only because more girls are involved. She noted that physicians must be alert to the fact that young athletes "may mask their symptoms." She said, "They may not want to let us know it hurts. When they're doing something they love, they may be afraid to let us know how much it hurts, because they're afraid we may restrict them."

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Donohue: My son, age 39, has been taking thorazine for 13 years. A few months ago he developed runny nose and watery eyes. He has trouble eating and sleeping because of this. Decongestants don't help him. The otorhinolaryngologist in our city said the only thing to do was to stop the medication, and this he cannot do. Do you have any suggestions? — M.Z.

Thorazine (a brand of chlorpromazine — a tranquilizer) can cause nasal congestion. However, 13 years is a long time and one would have expected a reaction long before now. There are substitutes for the medicine he's taking, and you might explore that with the doctor. Meanwhile, he should be evaluated by a doctor specializing in allergies. Congratulations on your flawless spelling of otorhinolaryngologist — one of the longer specialty names, meaning ear, nose, and throat doctor.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am concerned about having a baby because I have genital herpes infection. What precautions should I take? Would cesarean delivery protect the baby? — O.T.R.

The increase in genital herpes incidence is one of the reasons for the rise in cesarean deliveries in recent years. With active genital herpes, cesarean is done to protect the baby from the infection, which can occur in normal delivery.

Special tissue culture and blood tests may be recommended by your doctor at about the eighth month.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Please send me your material on diverticulosis. Also, is this condition hereditary? My father and four of his brothers and sisters all had it.— D.F.

It's not hereditary. Most people have some degree of this, which becomes more likely with age. Most of the bowel outpouchings are never diagnosed and never give trouble. About 20-25 per cent of the bowel pockets become inflammed (diverticulitis), which you'll find discussed in the booklet.

Civil war hit cotton hardest

Nicaragua crops survive

MANAGUA (AP) — Nicaragua's major export crops, cotton, coffee and sugar cane, survived the civil war in surprisingly good condition and should contribute to economic recovery, a leading trader said Monday.

Alejandro Martinez Cuenca, director of the Institute of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, said only the cotton harvest will drop significantly from last year, because of late plantings. He said Nicaragua expects to produce 200,000 bales of cotton, about a 60-per-cent drop from a normal harvest.

Nicaragua earned about $500 million from exports in 1978, with coffee the major factor. Martinez Cuenca declined to predict export earnings for this year but said he expects the coffee harvest to top last year's by one million pounds.

The institute Martinez Cuenca heads will become the buyer for major export crops and handle their sale on international markets following nationalization of the agriculture export business as well as meat, fish and grain production announced last week.

Sandinista rebels seized millions of acres in farmlands and fish and meat monopolies held by President Anastasio Somoza last month when they forced him into exile. Somoza's family had ruled the country for 42 years.

Nicaragua is a traditional food exporter for many years and is self-sufficient in basic food grains. Martinez Cuenca said the agricultural production base still has untapped potential that might help speed the country's post-war recovery.

But he added that international aid is urgently needed to provide seeds for new plantings and a sufficient harvest. He also said Nicaragua will try to shift part of its export market to the European Common Market, Arab countries, Eastern Europe, China and Japan from the United States.

Martinez Cuenca anticipated total coffee production would reach about 1.2 million 100 pound bags this year, of which one million bags would be exported. About 225,000 acres of coffee are under cultivation, he said, and despite problems caused by work stoppages during the conflict, production is expected to be normal.

Sugar production will be about 400 million pounds of which about 210 million pounds will be exported, he said, adding that damage inflicted on sugar refineries should be repaired by harvest time.

The major problem for cotton growers is to obtain enough insecticides, pesticides and fertilizers to ensure a successful harvest, Martinez Cuenca said. The civil war delayed cotton plantings in many areas, he added, but about 112,000 acres are being planted in the prime growing area in the north.

He said the country's reserves in the basic grains is sufficient to last through the next harvest late this year and that the government is opening 52 stores around the country to sell corn, rice, beans and soap in five-pound units at prices about 25 per cent lower than in public markets.

THE ACES

IRA G. CORN, JR.

"The true test of being comfortable with someone else is the ability to share silence." – Frank Tyger.

The defenders shared lots of silence after they paid off to today's vulnerable game. The tricks were there for them to take, but declarer must get a share of the credit for leading East astray.

West saw no future in cashing a high spade on opening lead. He knew that declarer had started five of them and he didn't want to help establish that suit. Certainly a reasonable decision. However, it led to a disastrous result.

East won the club ace and shifted to the diamond king. Now it seemed certain that the hand would go down to defeat. How could declarer keep from losing two spades, a diamond and a club?

Declarer saw no chance if he played normally, so he made an unusual play. On East's diamond king, he dropped his jack instead of winning his ace.

West played the diamond deuce on East's king of diamonds and perhaps East should have shifted to a spade. However, dummy's spade queen pictured little future in that and East continued with an innocent diamond.

Declarer pounced on his opportunity and finessed the diamond, winning with dummy's 10. A trump to his ace and the ace of diamonds provided a spade discard from dummy, and the rest was easy. Declarer conceded West one spade, but declarer could crossruff for 10 tricks and his game.

The defense cannot help giving a declarer his opportunities. But it takes an alert declarer to cash in on the breaks.

Elephant seals mob California beaches

By WALTER SULLIVAN

Colonist-N.Y. Times Service

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. — The elephant seal, once near extinction after hunters slaughtered it indiscriminately in the last century, has now become such a prolific breeder that it is colonizing the beaches of California.

The reproductive success of the three-ton animals, which now number an estimated 65,000, forces on conservationists a difficult decision: Should a protected species brought back from near annihilation be allowed to proliferate indefinitely?

Originally northern elephant seals, by the thousands, bred and were hunted for their oil on beaches from Point Reyes, north of San Francisco, to Cabo San Lazaro near the southern tip of Baja California. However, from 1884 to 1892, according to Dr. Burney J. LeBoeuf of the University of California here, there is no record of a single elephant seal having been seen anywhere.

Then, in 1892, specimen collectors for the Smithsonian Institution found eight of the huge animals on Isla de Guadalupe, which rises 4,800 feet from the Pacific Ocean west of Baja California.

They killed all but one. While a few others were presumably at sea, the total number of survivors may not have exceeded 20 and the next generation may have been sired by only one or two dominant bulls.

That, according to LeBoeuf, was one of the most drastic "genetic bottlenecks" known. As a consequence, the thousands of northern elephant seals alive today appear almost as alike as identical twins. They therefore seem to lack the genetic diversity that might enable the species to cope with new diseases or other environmental changes.

LeBoeuf fears that such genetic impoverishment may be faced by other species brought back from near extinction, such as the black-footed ferret, California condor, sea otter and California gray whale.

The northern elephant seal, weighing two to four tons and 16 feet long, is closely related to the slightly larger southern elephant seal, which inhabits the islands around Antarctica. It, too, was decimated by hunters of the last century, but apparently did not pass through so tight a genetic bottleneck and has retained more of its diversity.

The northern elephant seal began recovering initially because its sole rookery was too isolated to tempt hunters. When 264 of the animals were found on Guadalupe in 1922, Mexico outlawed a resumption of hunting, and the United States later followed suit.

The giant seals prefer islands but are confined to those with beaches, since they are too massive to climb onto rocks. In the 1970s, they have established themselves on two additional islands off California (Southeast Farallon Island off San Francisco and San Clemente off the town of that name) and two off Mexico's Baja California (Isla Natividad and Isla San Martin).

Now, however, they have run out of islands within their habitat and in 1975, for the first time in this century, a female was observed to have given birth to a pup on the mainland — a beach 19 miles up the coast from here opposite Ano Nuevo Island, whose beaches had become saturated with elephant seals.

Such is the rate of their population growth that this year about 100 pups were born on the mainland beach where four years ago there was but a single birth. Another 1,100 were born on the island. Some 570 adults occupied the mainland beach close to where Route 1, California's coastal highway, skirts the shore.

There are reports that elephant seals are already scouting the beaches at Point Reyes, the original northern limit of their range, but this could not be verified.

Dr. William Doyle, director of the university's Centre for Coastal Marine Studies, foresees an increasing number of episodes in which Californians, awakened by deep bellowing, call the police to announce that "there is this monster outside my beach window — dying."

Sooner or later, he fears, one of the huge animals will haul itself onto Route 1 in the dead of night "and some small foreign car will be demolished."

The massive animals hug the ground and often move so slowly they appear to be incapacitated. They can, nevertheless, inflict a severe bite and the bulls, in their battles for dominance of a harem, sometimes inflict fatal wounds on one another. It is the males that carry the elephantlike proboscis that gives the species its name.

The seals are docile unless approached within eight to 10 feet — a characteristic that helped expedite their near annihilation. However, there has been concern that for this reason tourists might come dangerously close.

Italian premier has few enemies

By HENRY TANNER

Colonist-N.Y. Times Service

ROME — Francesco Cossiga, the new prime minister of Italy, combines the reputation of a tough practical politician with the benign and witty manner of a slightly distracted professor.

For a man who was interior minister from 1976 to 1978, during the country's worst period of political violence, student unrest and street demonstrations — with a major earthquake thrown in for good measure, he has surprisingly few enemies.

Almost everybody else had praised. The Socialists, who had quarrelled with him for his handling of the kidnapping-murder of former prime minister Aldo Moro, chose to forgive him. The Communists had kind words for him even though they will vote against him as a matter of principle, because they are not included in his cabinet.

"He was a democrat even as interior minister. He is a civilized man," said Luciana Castellina, a member of the Chamber of Deputies for the Proletarian Unity Party.

Cossiga was born 51 years ago in Sassari, Sardinia, into a landed family with a tradition for civic service like the Berlinguers and the Segnis who also are from Sassari. Enrico Berlinguer, Cossiga's cousin, is leader of the Communist Party in Italy. The late Antonio Segni was president and an early sponsor of Cossiga.

The Berlinguers, Cossigas and Segnis who did not go into politics often became university teachers. Cossiga did both. He still teaches constitutional law at the University of Sassari.

Cossiga, a practising Roman Catholic, joined the Christian Democratic party at 16. He became the party's provincial secretary and, when 30, was elected to the national Parliament as deputy from Sassari.

He served as underseeretary of defence before becoming minister of the interior for the first time under Moro in 1976.

Soon after Cossiga took office, an earthquake in May 1976 destroyed entire towns in the Friuli region of northern Italy, killing about 900 persons and making more than 90,000 homeless. He mobilized the army for relief work.

In 1976 and early 1977 students and other young radicals of both the Left and the Right took to the streets in many Italian cities. Cossiga brought in para-military police units, including the carabinieris. In some places, such as Bologna, he used tanks.

In May 1977, a young woman, Giorgiana Masi, was shot dead during a demonstration in Rome sponsored by the Radical Party. Photographs later showed that policemen in civilian clothes, looking like longhaired students and wearing school bags, had infiltrated the demonstrators. One of them was identified with his gun drawn. The pictures led to charges that Miss Masi had been killed by the police.

Cossiga denied the charges that policemen were involved, contrary to eyewitness reports from journalists and others. The incident is the reason for the Radical Party's bitter opposition to him.

Cossiga had a heartbreaking role to play during the Moro tragedy. It was "his" police that failed to find the "prison" where Moro was held for 54 days and to prevent his murder. It was to him that Moro, his friend and political benefactor, wrote his first letter from captivity pleading for an "exchange of prisoners" — a deal in which the government would have freed one or several terrorists from jail in return for Moro's release.

In an interview during a period when there were daily threats on his life, he spoke at length in his office about the dilemma of an interior minister or policeman who knew he could not wage an effective fight against political terrorism without falling into the trap of taking repressive measures that would destroy the very democracy he wanted to defend. At the end of the interview he got up and said with a tired smile: "and now I will go home in my armored car."

Do old monasteries hold church story?

By KENNETH A. BRIGGS

Colonist-N.Y. Times Service

COLLEGEVILLE, Minn. — The mountainous regions of northern Ethiopia are dotted with hundreds of monasteries, many of them chiseled from solid rock centuries ago. If experts here are right, the monasteries are a storehouse of ancient manuscripts that could greatly alter prevailing views of early Christianity.

The Coptic church of Ethiopia was founded about 400 A.D. by missionaries from Syria who made their way through Egypt. The Rev. Godfrey Diekmann, a Benedictine monk and a professor of early church history at St. John's University here, believes that invaluable texts of Ethiopian Christianity have been preserved because of several factors.

These include a penchant of Ethiopian monks for insuring the longevity of texts by using nonperishable materials; the extreme care generally given to sacred documents throughout the Ethiopian church; the dryness of the climate, which would offer another form of protection, and the uninterrupted development of the country.

With that belief, Father Diekmann and his colleagues at St. John's are seeking access to the remote monasteries, as part of the university's long-range goal of microfilming manuscripts tucked away in monastic libraries in Europe and Africa for the last 1,000 years.

As scholars pore over the writings that have already been microfilmed, which cover subjects including music, astronomy, military tactics and medicine in addition to the tomes of theology, views of the Christian past and of the Middle Ages are being challenged.

Since 1965, more than 50,000 manuscripts have been microfilmed, catalogued and filed in uniform, numbered rows in a wing of the university library under the guidance of a staff of scholars and librarians.

While most of the Christian world was disrupted by the Seventh Century Islamic invasions around the rim of the Mediterranean, Ethiopia went unscathed. Therefore, Diekmann said, "the hundreds of manuscripts" kept and revered by the monks are likely to be the "last untouched reservoir of Christian writing in the world."

Many writings of such seminal thinkers as Melito of Sardis, who died about 160 A.D., are referred to by the first major church historian, Eusebius, but have never been found. Ethiopia is considered the last possible repository for copies of these works.

Six thousand manuscripts from the area around Addis Ababa have been microfilmed, but the northern sources have yet to be examined. So far, the most distinct discovery is a Bible from the 14th or 15th century, the oldest complete set of Scriptures known to exist in Ethiopia. It was found in the pocket of a monk who reportedly knew nothing of its value.

The purpose of the project, which was begun in 1965, is to insure that the contents of irreplaceable documents do not succumb to the ravages of natural or military disaster and the avarice of unscrupulous scholars.

Several recent cases have underscored the risks. In 1966, floods in Florence, Italy, destroyed some texts as did the fire that swept the monastery on Mount Athos in Greece in 1968.

Dr. Julian G. Plante, director of the project, steers a delicate course in his attempts to convince abbots and others in charge of monastic libraries that the benefits of making copies of the manuscripts far surpass any liabilities. "Some think it is cultural exploitation," Dr. Plante said in his library office. "They're afraid to lose control over their own heritage. My point is that we are helping to preserve their heritage."

Thatcher shocks U.K. with bold leadership

First 100 days reviewed

By LEONARD DOWNIE JR.
Colonist-Washington Post Service

LONDON, Aug. 11 — In a remarkably active first 100 days as prime minister, Margaret Thatcher has surprised Britain and attracted worldwide attention with the boldness of her leadership.

She has moved more swiftly and decisively than expected to try to wean Britain away from its postwar welfare-state economy by making drastic changes in its tax structure, ordering deep cuts in future government spending and beginning the denationalization of government-owned industries.

SHE ALSO HAS BEEN more flexible in foreign affairs than expected. She has dramatically changed her policy on black majority rule in Zimbabwe-Rhodesia at the Commonwealth conference in Lusaka, Zambia; has allowed many more Vietnamese refugees into Britain than she originally wanted; and has tried tactfully to persuade the European Economic Community that Britain is being shortchanged financially in the Common Market.

And Mrs. Thatcher has been more unflappable under pressure than expected, running her surprisingly diverse cabinet with a strong hand. She has been easily squelching hecklers in the rowdy rough-and-tumble of the twice-weekly questioning of the prime minister in the House of Commons and is winning over skeptical forign leaders with warm face-to-face diplomacy.

But as she prepares to leave London next week for a brief vacation after a workaholic's hectic pace these last 100 days, Mrs. Thatcher knows that the real testing time still lies ahead.

HER LUSAKA STATESMANSHIP will be tested when the warring factions in Zimbabwe-Rhodesia come here next month to debate a new black-majority-ruled constitution. It may well be impossible to reach any agreement, much less one that satisfied both her new African allies and the British right-wing Conservatives who vociferously champion the interests of Zimbabwe-Rhodesia's white minority.

More importantly, Mrs. Thatcher's resolve to reduce the government's role in Britain's failing economy will be tested by what is expected to be a very difficult autumn and winter.

Inflation has been fueled by Mrs. Thatcher's decisions to help finance income tax cuts by raising sales taxes and to cut oil consumption by pushing the price of gasoline. Inflation is expected to jump from 11 percent to 15 percent this month and reach nearly 20 percent before the end of the year.

UNEMPLOYMENT, AGGRAVATED by Mrs. Thatcher's cuts in government spending, government jobs and government subsidies of jobs in declining industries, also is expected to rise sharply from 1.3 million jobless now to 1.7 million next year and more than 2 million after that.

Labor unions, angered by these trends and by Mrs. Thatcher's plans to legislate new limits on their legal powers, are expected this winter to demand wage increases of more than 20 percent and shorter hours to create more jobs.

BRITISH INDUSTRY, squeezed by rising labor and raw material costs plus the high interest rates and strong pound sterling produced by Mrs. Thatcher's tight money policies, is expected to suffer from falling sales, exports, profits and investment, which could produce a rash of bankruptcies.

Mrs. Thatcher's Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Geoffrey Howe, has characterized the country's overall economic prospects in the near future as "almost frighteningly bad." British treasury experts forecast little or no national economnic growth for the next several years.

A Confederation of British Industry survey of business leaders and a study by the Trade Unions Congress disclosed widespread gloom. The stock market here has fallen 100 points since Mrs. Thatcher became prime minister.

AS PRICES HAVE GONE UP in the shops and at the gas pumps, Mrs. Thatcher's popularity in public opinion polls has fallen slightly but steadily, and the Conservatives have dropped behind the opposition Labor Party. The Conservative Party's chairman, Lord Thorneycroft, has warned party workers "to remain steady in support of the government we put in to do this job, no matter what the polls may say."

It is precisely because the British economy is so sick and the short-term prognosis is so bleak that Mrs. Thatcher and key Conservative cabinet members believe that now is the time for them to administer such bitter medicine. While it may hurt for a while, they believe it is the only way to cure the patient in the long run.

The Guardian newspaper's veteran political commentator, Peter Jenkins, used a different metaphor: "We have a government prepared to play a long match and to lose the first couple of sets if need be."

"IT'S A LONG HAUL exercise," Howe explained recently. "Turning around this economy requires the next four or more years before the next election and then five more after that. Our determination is to go for long run change and not keep jumping around."

Howe says he should not intervene, for example, to hold down the value of the pound to keep British exports from costing too much abroad, as the Conservatives' supporters have suggested.

"I just don't believe that every short and middle-term problem should be responded to by the government," Howe said. "The market forces should work on their own."

HOWE ALSO SAID he believes that labor unions will understand market forces dictate that they must moderate their wage demands this winter and fall behind inflation for a time. Otherwise not enough money will be in the Thatcher-squeezed economy to pay for large wages without a compensating loss of jobs, he said.

Similarly, the young energy secretary, David Howell, a personal protege of Mrs. Thatcher's who closely follows her lead, has been content, even eager, to allow surging gasoline and heating oil prices to depress the consumption of crude oil here.

HE SAID RECENTLY that he saw little need for such U.S.-style conservation incentives as tax credits for home insulation. Howell said he believed British drivers used less gasoline by taking shorter vacation trips this summer because gasoline prices, now at more than $2.50 a gallon, finally rose faster than inflation last month.

Shock therapy to stimulate self-interest, with the encouragement of gradual reductions in the income tax rate each year, is essentially the treatment that Mrs. Thatcher's government is administering in Britain to try to heal its economy.

Mrs. Thatcher runs her government in the same no-nonsense fashion. She dictates the agenda and many of the decisions of her cabinet meetings, which often have been more collegial councils in previous governments. She impatiently scolds ministers who inpede her progress, embarrassing them in front of their peers.

COMMENTATOR JENKINS has pointed out that "her style of prime ministership means that, if and when things go badly wrong, there will be nobody else to blame. Moreover, she will not find herself surrounded by loyal and affectionate colleagues."

A number of respected politicians and political journalists here on both the left and right privately predict that, although the Conservatives have a safe majority in Parliament to finish out a full five-year term in power before the next election, Mrs. Thatcher might be replaced as prime minister by the Conservatives in midterm.

BUT SHE RESPONDED to arguments by Lord Carrington, her influential foreign secretary, that it would be in Britain's best interests to bend to the opinion of Black Africa and try again to produce a more acceptable black majority govenment. Carrington also overcame Mrs. Thatcher's personal feeling that Britain is being flooded by too many immigrants of "alien cultures" and persuaded her to accept a large number of Vietnamese refugees.

In both cases, Mrs. Thatcher turned what seemed to critics to be embarrassing policy positions, made worse by insensitive-sounding off-the-cuff remarks, into personal diplomatic victories. Mrs. Thatcher took the credit for the Zimbabwe-Rhodesian peace initiative worked out in Lusaka by Australian and African leaders as well as the British. She suggested the United Nations conference on the Vietnamese refugee problem and led what became a chorus of criticism that put Hanoi on the defensive.

HAVING FOUGHT HARD to win power she once thought would always be denied her because she was a woman, Mrs. Thatcher seems ready and able to do whatever is necessary to protect and increase it so that she can carry on her crusade against socialism and for the revival of Britain's economic health and global prestige. She is both a boldly ideological and shrewdly practical politician who worries a great deal about her image.

"I think I am an Iron Lady," she told Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda during their exercise in mutual admiration at the conclusion of the Commonwealth conference in Lusaka. "But the softer you are inside, the more necessary it is to have an iron cladding on the outside."

Camosun students complete varied programs

A large number of students have successfully completed post-secondary programs at Camosun College between January and July of this year.

Camosun offers a broad range of programs and it is difficult for the college to hold a single graduation ceremony as many of the programs are still in progress.

The list below does not include students who completed their own specific goals in preparatory, general education or university transfer courses, or the many career program students who were successful in finding employment before program completion.

Students who have completed their programs:

Governor-General's Silver Medal
Sylvia Button — Social Service Assistant.

Lieutenant-Governor's Silver Medal
Mark Stone — Electrical/Electronics Technology.

Applied Communication — Barry Bateman, Kevin Crofton, Rod Crowe, George Harrold, Karen McVey, John Nicholson, Cathy O'Neill, Mary O'Neill, Wendy Peters, Jan Rossley.

Province pressed to protect rights of disabled

By STEPHEN HUME
Colonist reporter

The B.C. Human Rights Code should be amended to include the disabled and handicapped, says a report from the B.C. Public Service Commission.

The report, obtained by the Colonist, says B.C. is one of the few provinces with human rights legislation that does not mention the disabled or handicapped.

Equal opportunity for disadvantaged people in B.C. will receive only "lip service" if the code is not amended, the report says.

THE REPORT was submitted to the labor ministry in February, 1978. A recommendation to amend the code has yet to come from Labor Minister Allan Williams.

The report was resubmitted this week to the labor ministry. It was also given to 12 agencies for the handicapped in B.C.

The Public Service Commission is the major hiring authority in the province and with about 40,000 employees is one of the province's major employers.

THE REPORT recommends that the Human Rights Code be amended to include the following:

- "Disabled and handicapped" in the code following the word "color" in sections relating to accommodation, purchase of property, tenancy, employment advertising, employment (promotion), unions and other occupational associations.
- A statement on the 'spirit of legislation' indicating that every disabled and handicapped person has a right to full and equal recognition and exercise of human rights and freedoms, "without distinction, exclusion or preference based on the fact of disability or handicap."
- A definition of disabled and handicapped: "... a person or persons limited significantly and persistently in the performance of normal activities by reason of physical or mental incapacity or perceived as such."

HUMAN RIGHTS Branch director Kathleen Ruff said Monday in an interview that the branch has no footing in the Human Rights Code to protect the rights of handicapped or disabled people.

She referred to an incident last month in which a woman was turned away from an apartment in the Interior because she had a mentally handicapped son.

There was nothing the branch, which enforces the code, could do under the law.

RUFF SAID: "I think the time has come to give mentally and physically handicapped persons equal protection under the law as other groups that suffer discrimination. This includes people with certain health conditions such as epilepsy.

"The issue in this whole area is exactly the same for any group, that they are not being given the courtesy of individual consideration."

WE'RE HELPLESS UNDER LAW—RUFF

The Public Service Commission report is critical of a human rights board of inquiry three years ago that ruled against a seaman who had lost one hand and one foot.

THE BOARD ruled that handicapped people were covered by the B.C. Human Rights Code.

However, it also ruled that B.C. Ferries' bias against hiring David Jefferson was "reasonable" despite the fact that his mechanical aptitude was superior and he was a "better than average worker."

The decision was upheld by the B.C. Supreme Court snd was considered disastrous by human rights advocates.

THE REPORT says the Jefferson decision "infuriated the disabled community (and) in effect sanctioned discrimination in employment practises against the disabled and handicapped which makes the role of the personnel placement division of the Public Service Commission more difficult than ever."

The director of the personnel placement program, Lorna Vinden, said Monday in an interview that she was expecting a rapid response from the agencies receiving the report.

These agencies are the following:

CANADIAN Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, Social Planning and Review Council of B.C., B.C. Coalition of the Disabled, Multiple Sclerosis Society of Victoria and Vancouver Island, Canadian Mental Health Association, Epilepsy Society of B.C., Western Institute for the Deaf, Canadian National Institute for the Blind, Canadian Paraplegic Association, B.C. Association for the Mentally Retarded, Cerebral Palsy Association of B.C., and Helen Austin, consultant to the handicapped for the B.C. labor ministry.

Sights, not site, on tour

NANAIMO (CP) — A visit today by several hundred scientists involves nothing more than sightseeing—and the sights will not include a proposed location for a nuclear power facility on Vancouver Island, a tour organizer said Tuesday.

Dr. George Ludgate of the University of British Columbia was denying a statement from the Greenpeace Foundation, a Vancouver-based conservation group, which said the visiting scientists "may be used to lend credibility to B.C. Hydro's proposed large-scale nuclear installation on Vancouver Island."

Ludgate said the visit by some of the 600 delegates to an international conference on high-energy physics and nuclear structure would be strictly recreational.

Greenpeace director Rod Marining said in the statement: "It cannot be purely sightseeing or tourism when they are being taken apparently to a nearby proposed nuclear site."

Ludgate said the Nanaimo visit was planned because arrangements could not be made to have the delegates visit Victoria on their day off from conference sessions.

"Believe me, if we could have got a ship to anywhere more interesting than Nanaimo, we certainly would have," he said.

Despite the disclaimers, the Nanaimo branch of the B.C. Energy Coalition planned to greet the ferry carrying the scientists with boatloads of placard-waving protesters.

CANADA

Ottawa shrinks fusion funds

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will likely forfeit an opportunity to particpate in a major international nuclear fusion project to test the near-perfect form of energy because of a lack of government commitment to fusion research.

The federal fusion research program, virtually a one-man operation working out of the National Research Council, has a budget of only $260,000 this year compared with about $400 million spent in the United States.

U.S. ENERGY officials approached Canada earlier this year about considering a site for a $1-billion international test fusion reactor. But the research council warned in a report last March that Canada must first have the necessary scientific capability and federal interest to take the project seriously.

Jim Mullin, a senior official at the department of science and technology, said this week that federal support for nuclear fusion was not expected to increase.

"It is accurate to say that the priority of fusion research has not changed," he said.

NUCLEAR fusion, the process that fuels the sun and gives the hydrogen bomb its awesome power, is created by the fusion of two light nuclei, such as deuterium and tritium, to make a single heavier nucleus.

Deuterium, found in sea water, holds the promise of an inexhaustible supply of energy.

While nuclei are easily split, a process called fission, they are not easily fused. Joining them requires enough energy for them to overcome a natural repulsion and smash together.

BUT FUSION may provide a limitless energy supply. It would be relatively harmless to the environment in its creation and should leave behind no by-products which can be converted into dangerous weapons.

The conditions permitting fusion in the sun, including temperatures about 100 million degrees Celsius, can now be reproduced fleetingly in a laboratory. But scientists agree the costs are staggering.

The research is so expensive that major industrialized countries involved in nuclear fusion are planning to pool their resources in the construction of a test reactor for a project called Intor.

CANADA, however, is not a member of the International Fusion Research Council, which includes such countries as the Netherlands, Australia, Italy, Sweden, Japan, the United States and the Soviet Union.

And National Research Council officials who hoped to participate more in international projects expected the 1978 fusion research budget of $400,000 at least to be doubled. Instead, it was nearly cut in half to $260,000.

Now that U.S. scientists have shown fusion conditions are possible in a laboratory, international members want to design and construct an experimental reactor model, mainly to study engineering techniques.

WHILE CANADA was suggested as a possible site, other prospects include the Soviet Union, Finland, Italy and France, says the council report.

A decision on the site is not expected until next year, Mullin says.

Bringing Intor to Canada would not only add prestige to the scientific community here. The research council figures the construction industry and local suppliers will benefit as the reactor is built. Also, the staff involved with Intor would bring nearly 1,000 "permanent tourists" into the country for at least 10 years.

BUT THE federal advisory council on fusion-related research said: "A Canadian initiative to have Canada seriously considered for the Intor site would involve the demonstration of a strong federal interest in the project by the government."

Such interest must include a "credible scientific and engineering capability in fusion research and development."

Hospitals attack rate hike

2,000 extended beds could close

More than 2,000 extended-care beds in B.C. could be closed down if the provincial government does not come through with more money for private hospitals, according to a spokesman for the hospitals.

The net effect of a closure would be fewer private and more non-profit or government-operated hospitals—and much higher costs for taxpayers.

Pat Shields, manager of a private hospital in Vancouver and president of the B.C. Association of Private Hospitals, said Tuesday that the increases awarded by the government to extended-care hospitals which were part of the provincial long-term-care program were "insulting and outrageous."

THE INCREASES average out to nine per cent, but vary widely among the five different levels of care provided by long-term-care facilities. The rate for a patient at the Intermediate III level of care will rise by 23.7 per cent, while that for an extended-care patient, the highest level of care provided by the private hospitals, will rise by only 1.4 per cent.

None of the increases came close to the 44-per-cent increase in costs experienced by the province's private hospitals, Shields said. The key factor in that cost increase was a 56-per-cent wage increase granted to hospital employees in binding arbitration under the Essential Services Disputes Act.

THE WORST part of the new fee structure was that for the extended-care patients, Shields said. The per diem rate for them will rise, under the new fee structure, from $34.50 a day (of which the patient pays $6.50 and the government the balance) to $35 a day, an increase of only 50 cents, or 1.4 per cent.

Extended-care patients make up more than half the patient load in most of the private hospitals, with intermediate III patients making up the balance. Strangely, the rate revision brings intermediate III patients to the same rate as extended-care patients, from $28.30 to $35, even though extended-care patients require more nursing care.

SHIELDS SAID the hospitals were just now being hit by the effects of the 56-per-cent wage increase and could not waste time in getting higher rates. An emergency meeting of the Association of Private Hospitals will be held this afternoon to map the association's next move.

That could be closing the hospitals down, withdrawing from the long-term-care program, or reducing the service provided to patients.

The provincial government pays more to non-profit and government-operated extended-care hospitals than it does to the private hospitals. The rate varies between about $45 and $56 a day for an extended-care patient in those facilities, and capital expenses, which come out of the per diem rate at private hospitals, are extra.

THE TIMING of the announcement of the increase was interesting, Shields said. It was only last Friday that the provincial government announced it would spend an additional $13 million to pick up all the deficits of the province's public hospitals.

Shields said negotiations over the rates had taken some time. The government had proposed a two-per-cent increase for private hospitals last spring, but had revised its position after meeting with the hospital spokesmen. As late as Aug. 2, private hospitals had been assured by the health ministry that new rates would be put into effect only if the hospitals agreed to them. He said they did not agree to the latest proposals, which were ratified by the health ministry only a few days later.

Victoria home for a million

A vacationing Montreal couple has decided to move to Victoria after a $1-million win in the last Loto Canada draw.

The city proved a lucky place to be.

John and Patricia Ganas were taking a last look at the city over the long weekend before heading back east when they and a friend began wondering whether any of them had won in the lottery.

And sure enough, the Ganases had become instant millionaires.

The money is now in the bank and the winners are back from visiting a son in Vancouver to look at houses in Oak Bay. Mrs. Ganas has her heart set on a bungalow close to the water.

She's already quit her secretarial post at Montreal's Jewish General Hospital. Ganas has given notice for the end of October as assistant to the chairman of Steinberg Inc.

Mrs. Ganas says she will buy a new renal dialysis machine for the hospital where she once worked.

Mrs. Ganas has been on a lucky streak since winning $30,000 years ago at Monte Carlo.

She was $900 ahead last year on football pools and until her recent big win had collected $1,800 on Loto tickets.

She even had two $100 winning tickets this time.

Egypt plans to auction drug haul

CAIRO (Reuter) — Egypt's interior minister says two tons of illegal drugs seized Tuesday from smugglers will be auctioned off in Western Europe.

Interior Minister Police-General Mohammed Nabawi Ismail did not say where the auction was supposed to take place or to whom it would be open.

New union move by AirWest staff

Canadian Press

Employees of AirWest Airlines have applied to the Canadian Labor Relations Board to have Teamsters Local 213 replaced as their bargaining agent by a newly formed local association.

An application was filed Aug. 1 by a group of employees registered as the Regional Aviation Employees Association and claiming to represent a majority of the employees at the airline.

A spokesman at the board said objections to the application had been filed by the Teamsters, and a decision was expected to take five or six weeks.

The Teamsters now represent 110 pilots, co-pilots, maintenance personnel, reservations clerks and others at the airline. They won a first contract last year after a 5½-month strike.

The Jim Pattison Group of Companies purchased AirWest from founder Norman Gold and is embarked on an expansion plan.

"We are neither discouraging nor encouraging our employees in this," a spokesman for the company said. "We just want to see the democratic process upheld."

Boom in tourism absorbs workers

A total of 32,000 young men and women between the ages of 15 and 19 flooded the B.C. labor market in July, but the summer tourist boom helped nudge unemployment figures down to 6.8 per cent.

In July a year ago, unemployment stood at eight per cent.

The monthly report on labor force statistics from the labor ministry notes that the actual increase in the labor force compared with 12 months earlier was 21,000 persons, an increase of 1.7 per cent over the same period last year.

But while the jobs have kept stride with the labor force increase in July, there are still 87,000 people in B.C. out of work. The ranks of the unemployed are close to being evenly divided, with 41,000 men seeking jobs, and 46,000 women.

Male unemployment declined by 3,000 during July and female unemployment increased by the same number.

The actual decline in unemployment in July compared with a year ago totalled 8,000 workers. The bulk of the improvement was confined to the ranks of male workers.

Bugged fish swims 400 miles in 3 weeks

A fast-swimming steelhead logged 400 miles in three weeks before being caught late in July near French Creek, Parksville.

G.W. Anderson of Parksville landed the steelhead and picked up an additional $25 for his efforts by returning a small radio transmitter placed in the fish's stomach Oct. 25, 1978, on the Chilcotin River near Alexis Creek.

The fish was monitored at various intervals as it began its southern migration, but was last heard from 15 miles below Chilko Lake, just before entering the Fraser.

Anderson's report, combined with the last report from the fish itself, enabled fish and game officials to log its journey of 400 miles in the last three weeks of its life.

The environment ministry said the purpose of the transmitters was to find out where steelhead from the Chilcotin spent their winters and spawned.

The answer seems to be Vancouver Island.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

The year 1979 will always remain in my mind as the Year of the Weed. Just what particular set of weather conditions or what particular load of purchased farmyard manure is responsible for the infestation, I wouldn't know, but I don't think I have ever seen a more prolific growth of chickweed, poverty weed, bindweed, plaintain, portulaca, thistle and all the other green pests. Keeping them under control is a never-ending job, and the moment you turn your back, up pops another crop, apparently born fully grown and all set to start scattering their infernal seeds.

I don't like hard work any more than the next man, and for years I have been experimenting to find methods of controlling weeds without too much back-breaking labor. I can't say I have made much progress in this field of research, but one thing I have noticed: the shallower you hoe, the quicker the weeds die.

Deep hoeing is a lot of work and doesn't do as good a job. The weeds are simply transplanted from one place to another, and if a shower or a heavy dew comes along to freshen them up, they have little trouble in pushing their roots down again.

For hoeing between the rows and between well-spaced plants in the perennial border, I don't think any implement does quite such a good job as the scuffle hoe. While these come in several sizes and shapes, I prefer a rather small, light one, easier to control accurately when scuffling off weeds which are growing close to valued plants.

I keep my little scuffle hoe razor sharp by dressing the forward-facing blade with a flat file. When I scuffle the soil with this sharp blade, it slices the weeds off just a fraction of an inch below the surface and does no damage to the shallow-rooted subjects in the garden. The draw hoe, which operates much more deeply in the soil, can be a menace to corn and raspberries and such plants which maintain their active roots just below the soil surface.

Another thing that appears to be about the scuffle hoe is that you work backwards down the row, so you never need step on the freshly hoed ground. With the draw hoe, the work is a strenuous chopping motion and you progress forward, trampling all over your work. This means going back over the ground with the rake, not only to erase footprints and leave things shipshape, but because tramped-on weeds have an uncanny knack of insinuating their roots back into the soil.

It is quite possible to make our midsummer dry spells work in favor in the control of weeds, simply by arranging things so all the water goes on the plants and none on the weeds. I grow most of my summer row crops — vegetables and gladiolus — in shallow trenches or furrows in the ground, and when watering with the hose, it is easy to channel the water into these miniature ditches, where it goes directly to the roots of my plants leaving the alleys between the rows as dry as a bone. Weeds seldom get a chance to germinate in this hard-baked ground.

There are some plants, of course, which need to be freshened up occasionally with an overhead watering. Runner beans, for instance, have a habit of dropping their blossoms and failing to "set" unless given frequent shower baths.

On the other hand, such plants as tomatoes and potatoes make healthier growth when the roots are irrigated without wetting the foliage.

Arthur Hoppe

Among cognoscenti, the odds-on favorite to be the next president of the United States is that Harvard-educated gorilla whom hardly anyone has ever heard of.

What captured the admiration of the experts is the well-endowed primate's brilliant campaign strategy. "I realize that I am starting this race as a political unknown," the Brooklyn-born father of two admitted privately. "And I aim at all costs to keep it that way."

The knowledgeable student of political science noted that, given a choice, the American public nine times out of 10 will vote for a political unknown over a political known.

"Look at the last presidential race," he said. "Jimmy Carter, an absolute political unknown, licked half a dozen political knowns in all the early Democratic primaries.

"It wasn't until he became a little bit known himself that Governor Jerry Brown, an even more unknown political unknown, was able to beat him in the last few primaries. Mr. Carter, however, had no trouble whatsoever walloping Mr. Ford, who was far more known at the time than he.

"But that was almost three years ago. Since then, Mr. Carter has become politically known and Mr. Ford politically forgotten. Thus the polls naturally show that today Mr. Ford would wallop Mr. Carter. In fact, they show that any Republican would wallop Mr. Carter except John Connally who, while perhaps not well-known, is obviously known well enough."

Among the Democratic possibilities, the astute simian singled out Governor Brown as one who had recognized the problem of being a known politician and was doing his utmost to overcome it.

"Now that he is a nationally-known politician, he is, of course, trailing Mr. Carter badly," said the Ivy League intellectual. "But despite countless speeches, press conferences and even some legislation, he has ingeniously managed to keep his politics unknown.

"Whether a known politician with unknown politics can beat a politicial known is, at this time, unknown."

The big-hearted ape reserved his warmest praise for Senator Teddy Kennedy. "Here is a man who, through grit, determination and keeping his mouth shut whenever possible, has become a frontrunner despite the overwhelming handicap of being a political known. People defiantly say, 'It's all water under the bridge and I'm going to vote for him anyway!'

"Just think how universally popular that man would be today," said the barrel-chested philosopher, shaking his shaggy head in awe, "if only he were a political unknown."

Thus the determined dark horse plans to launch his campaign by taking a job teaching Indian hogan construction and advanced gymnastics at a summer camp in the Adirondacks. He will remain there until the New Hampshire primary next March to insure his anonymity. Even so, he is by no means confident of victory.

"I know I would win in a landslide," he said grimly, "if I weren't cursed with an unforgettable face."

Sydney Harris

The whole purpose of a human society is to permit people to make their optimum contribution and to benefit from the optimum contribution of other people. This is why we are, in Aristotle's old phrase, "social creatures" before anything else.

But there seems to be a definite upper limit to socialization in some societies; or at least, some societies learn much more slowly than others the imperative for give-and-take. In American society, so far, it is mostly take and little give.

I was thinking about this the other day, contrasting our public manners with those of the British, who have been tightly packed into a little isle for many centuries and have learned to adapt with smoothly good manners and fair play for all.

The British "queue up" for nearly everything that is in short supply. Even whan waiting for a bus or tram, there is no jostling and jockeying for position; no one would dare to push in front, and everyone waits his turn as he or she arrives. Public disapproval of aggressiveness simply would not permit such bad manners.

A few mornings ago I was leaving the doctor's office, accompanied by my younger daughter. Because I was not well, I took shelter in the doorway while she went to the curb to hail a taxi. It was a terrible fiasco. Being a well-mannered young lady, she did not assert herself, and a half-dozen people who had appeared later rammed themselves into taxis before she had a chance to make her claim.

It pains me, as it pained her, to admit that the women were just as crude and assertive as the men, no doubt because they are forced to be in our sauve qui peut society. As she apologized to me for the long delay, she vowed to become "taxi-wise" and adopt the same football tactics as everybody else in pursuit of a cab.

Now isn't this a shame, and isn't it diametrically opposed to everything we are suupposed to teach our children — to be respectful, to be considerate of other people, to wait one's turn, to be fair and generous? When they get into the "real world," as it were, they quickly learn that these maxims do not apply, that in the hurly-burly of a daily existence our ethical injunctions have as little relevance as our religious tenets.

Growing up should not be a period of disillusionment for young people, but a period of confirmation and strengthening of their early training. I told my daughter I would still prefer her to act like a lady (and my sons like gentlemen) and wait a little longer for a cab, than become as uncivil as the people who beat her out — but it is likely that time and growing disgust will wear her down and turn her into a replica of the adults she is forced to compete with. This is one reason we get worse as we get older.

There has to be something basically wrong with a social order that puts the individual first, even when he should not be. A competitive society that discards its sense of community can only end up, like Shakespeare's "universal wolf," in devouring itself entirely.

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — Steve Ford, 23-year-old rodeo-performing son of former president Gerald R. Ford, makes his movie debut in Cattle Annie and Little Britches, which just finished shooting in Durango, Mexico.

Rod Steiger and Ben Johnson, Steve's costars, are urging the handsome young Ford to continue with an acting career.

"It sure beats cowboy wages," says Steve. He thinks he may act to help pay for a cattle ranch in Montana.

"Ben Johnson told me," says Steve, "that holding Duke Wayne's horse in all those Westerns kept him from going broke performing in rodeos."

Sugar Ray Robinson, who has kept hundreds of ghetto kids off the streets with his Sugar Ray Youth Foundation, is expanding his program to San Francisco.

The still beautiful Gene Tierney was being congratulated by almost everyone in the Polo Lounge the other day on her revealing autobiography.

Asked her what she thought of Michelle Phillips being chosen by producer-writer Andrew J. Fenady to play the Tierney-like girl in The Man With Bogart's Face.

"It doesn't bother me," said the 59-year-old actress. "I don't look like that Gene Tierney anymore."

Driver found guilty

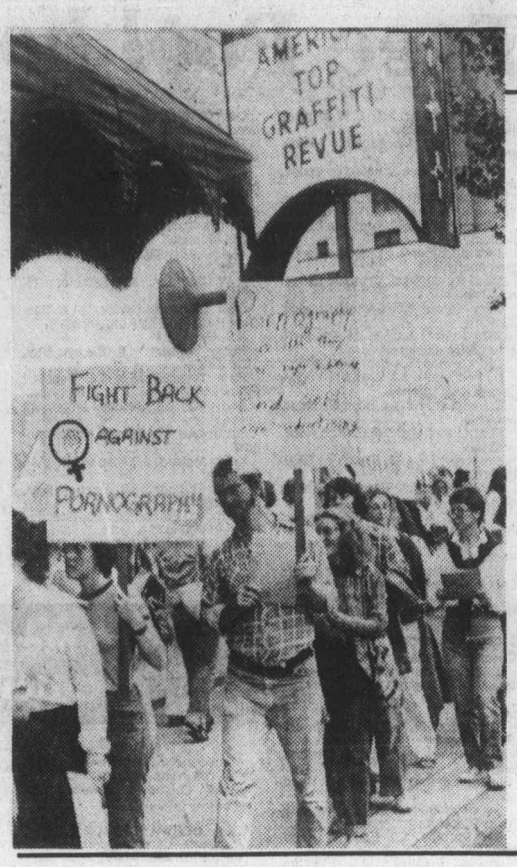
TORONTO (CP) — Robert Charles Stewart, 30, was convicted Tuesday in county court of criminal negligence causing the death of dance instructor Judy Jordan, who was dragged screaming to her death after being hit by a car last November.

Judge Lloyd Graburn said in handing down the verdict that there was no doubt Mrs. Jordan, 29, was struck and killed by a car driven by Stewart, who will be sentenced Sept. 11.

She was hit as she walked into the driveway of her apartment last Nov. 27. Stewart had pleaded not guilty and elected trial by judge.

Graburn said Stewart knew he had hit the woman and knew he was dragging her under his car, noting that he turned out his lights to escape detection.

In his judgment after the 16-day trial, Graburn said Stewart acted in a wanton and reckless manner with disregard for human life.



SEXIST OR SEXY, CHILDREN GET HELP

While protesters from Women Against Sexist Advertising and Rape Relief marched outside the Cave theatre restarurant in Vancouver Monday night, semi-naked models like this one performed in a fashion show to raise funds for a children's hospital. The protest groups claimed the show was sexist, while an organizer said it was only sexy.

Deadly mix escapes into river

PLESSISVILLE, Que. (CP) — The water supply of at least two communities has been endangered by an accidental spill of 250 gallons of a highly toxic chemical mixture, including cyanide, into the Becancour River at nearby Lyster, Que., a spokesman for Quebec's Environmental Protection Service said Tuesday.

Lucien Paquin said the spill occurred Sunday night at a plant run by Lyster Die Casting, but was not reported to the Environmental Protection Service.

He said the chemical spill was discovered by officials of Quebec's fish and game department, conducting studies near the river, who noticed Monday that fish were dying.

The municipalities of Daveluyville and Plessisville, with a total population of about 10,000, were ordered Tuesday to stop taking drinking water from the river while government chemists conducted tests.

The town of Notre-Dame-Lourdes-de-Ham was originally thought to have been affected as well, but it was later found the town took its water supply from a well.

Paquin said the chemical mixture included zinc, chromium, lead and copper, as well as cyanide.

Officials at Lyster Die Casting were meeting with officials from the Environmental Protection Service Tuesday afternoon.

Mayor Jean-Marie Fortier of Plessisville said the town was advised of the spill at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday.

"The people have been alerted not to consume the water," he said, but added that he didn't know much more about the spill.

Paquin said that although the chemicals had been in the river since Sunday, there had been no reports of human poisoning, so "we can hope to come clear this time."

But he warned that the government would study the possibility of legal action against the company.

BARRED BY GRITS, SCHOLAR ADMITTED BY TORIES

VANCOUVER (CP) — A left-leaning West German political economist, barred from entering Canada for five years by the former Liberal government, has been admitted to the country by the Progressive Conservatives.

Andre Gunder Frank, a professor of development studies at University of East Anglia in England, is attending an academic conference at University of British Columbia on a special ministerial permit issued by Ron Atkey, employment and immigration minister.

Frank will address the International Congress of Americanists twice this week.

He said Monday he didn't know why the previous government refused to let him into the country, but that Bud Cullen, former immigration minister, had stated he was being barred for security reasons and not because of his political views.

One possible explanation for his exclusion by the previous government, Frank told a news conference, was a series of letters he exchanged with FLQ member Pierre Vallieres while Frank was teaching at Sir George Williams University (now Concordia University) in Montreal in the late 1960s.

He said Cullen denied this was his reason for refusing him entry to Canada for academic visits in 1974, 1975 and 1977.

"If it had been that," said Frank, "it would be ironic since Vallieres has long been rehabilitated and has worked for the federal government."

Frank said he was initially refused permission to enter Canada to attend this congress, but permission was granted by Atkey after members of the Canadian academic community made numerous appeals on his behalf.

He adamantly refused to be labelled a Marxist, but said he believes capitalism should be replaced.

Worm price war tied to threats, $42,000 theft

TORONTO (CP) — A bait dealer who had $42,000 worth of worms stolen from his warehouse during the weekend said Tuesday the theft was part of a war over prices between Canadian and American dealers.

Peter Kotsifas said the theft followed three weeks of threatening telephone calls telling him to get out of the bait business.

A recent cold spell that kept worms underground has forced the price of worms to rise. Canadian dealers are getting $50 to $65 for 1,000 worms from U.S. wholesalers.

Kotsifas said he expected the price to keep rising.

"This year the price is double last year's and American dealers are not happy," he said. "I'm not happy, either. I'd rather have a steady price so I can deal steadily. Every day the prices go up and the people who are buying the worms get angry."

Kotsifas said he feared for the safety of his family.

The worm theft was the second in southwestern Ontario in three days. Thieves stole 21,000 worms worth $1,050 Friday from pickers in Guelph.

In July, 1978, someone placed two Molotov cocktails near a Hamilton worm distributor's truck and its $50,000 cargo. Toronto worm exporters claimed then it was the beginning of retaliation by U.S. worm wholesalers against small independent Canadian dealers who had raised their exports.

Calgarian's 44-pounder proves Tyee Pool hot spot

The tyee salmon are now in Campbell River's famed Tyee Pool.

Proof of that is provided by a 44-pound tyee Frank Rossetto of Calgary landed casting off the Argonaut wharf, at the foot of the Tyee Pool, with Stingsilda.

Had he been a Colonist subscriber, Rossetto would have taken over the lead in the competition for the Jim Gilbert Drift Fishing Trophy and prize. Still leader in that category is Colonist subscriber John Allbright, with a 37.2-pound chinook from James Island on Pirken.

Two Cordova Bay boys killed as car hits rock

A single-car mishap in Central Saanich early Tuesday morning claimed the lives of two young Cordova Bay residents.

A 1973 Gremlin apparently smashed into a rock at the intersection of West Saanich Road and Old West Road and ran on into a utility pole, knocking out power in the area at about 4 a.m. for about half an hour.

David James Shillington, 16, of 5226 Rambler, and Dale William Guenther, 14, of 5185 Rambler, were pronounced dead at the scene. Central Saanich police investigating the accident required floodlights provided by the Saanich fire department.

Coroner John Davidge said he was awaiting autopsy and police reports before making a decision concerning an inquest.

The vehicle belonged to Guenther's mother.

Worst sea-race disaster: 30 boats lost, toll mounts

Triple-slayer changes mind, begs for life

Pro-death MP: 'I love' brother

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — Triple murderer Steve Beattie begged a judge to sentence him to death after a jury found him guilty. Now he has changed his mind.

"Even the worst man has the right to life," Beattie said. "Only God can take a life."

The 37-year-old karate expert — a death row prisoner at Florida State Prison near Starke for seven months — made the statement Monday after his brother — a Canadian MP — said he favors the death penalty and will vote to restore capital punishment when the issue comes up in Parliament.

DUNCAN BEATTIE, 50-year-old Tory MP for Hamilton Mountain, said he will not avoid the issue even though his brother has been sentenced to die in the electric chair in Florida.

"I still believe in the death penalty though I love him very much,' Beattie said in an interview with CBC television.

Stephen Beattie, whose sentence is automatically appealed under Florida's death penalty law, also was interviewed by the CBC. He said he understands his brother's position but does not agree with him.

"It's legalized murder, that's what it is is — premieditated, legalized murder," he said.

THE CONDEMNED man said there is always the possibility an innocent man will be executed. He said evidence used to convict him could not have been used in Canada or Europe.

Beattie, was convicted of killing his business partner, John Mitchell and cleaning women Patricia Beck, 18, and Carol Raduazzo, 34.

The three were found shot to death at the World of Health Spa in North Miami Beach on July 23, 1978. Mitchell and Steve Beattie were co-owners of the spa.

BEATTIE, BORN IN Scotland, moved to Canada with his father, a professional fighter, when he was seven. He came to Miami in the early 1960s.

He held a number of jobs: working as abouncer for a Miami club, a boxing manager and fight promoter and sometimes as a bodyguard for visiting celebrities, such as Elvis Presley. He also taught karate.

Duncan Beattie, was first elected to the House of Commons in 1972, was defeated in 1976 but re-elected this year.

114 rescued from storm

Colonist wire services

PLYMOUTH, England — Storm-crippled yachts limped or were towed into port in Ireland and southwestern England early today as the death toll mounted in the biggest yacht racing disaster in history.

At least 10 yachtsmen were reported dead, seven were missing and hundreds more were unaccounted for as ships, lifeboats and helicopters searched the Atlantic through the night for victims of 120-kilometre-an-hour gales which turned the classic Fastnet ocean race into a desperate fight for survival.

The Royal Ocean Racing Club, sponsors of the race, said most of those not heard from were expected to be out of danger as winds subsided.

The club said about 30 yachts were sunk or abandoned, 114 persons were rescued and about another 100 boats were safe.

Canadian boats safe

Two of the the three official Canadian challengers in the 970-kilometre (605-mile) classic climax to the Admiral's Cup series were among the craft reported to have reached safety.

The RORC said that Pachena, skippered by John Newton of the Vancouver Yacht Club, sought shelter in Cork, Ireland, and Evergeen, skippered by Don Green of the Royal Hamilton Yacht Club, retired from the race and put into Plymouth.

The third yacht, Magistri, skippered by Charles Bentley of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, Toronto, was reported to have been sighted by search aircraft and was apparently continuing the race.

A fourth Canadian yacht, Manitou, skippered by Ken Merrow, formerly of Oakville, Ont., also started the race but pulled out early with a damaged mast and returned to Cowes, on the Isle of Wight.

Mayor William Vogel of the Vancouver suburb of Surrey was reported aboard the British yacht Jaujaime, owned by construction magnate Sir Maurice Laing. A crew member who stayed ashore during the race told a Vancouver radio station that the yacht had been sighted by the Royal Navy and he assumed those on board were in good condition.

Also among craft unaccounted for were the three official U.S. entries — Imp, Aries and Williwaw — and a training vessel from the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., with 14 crew aboard.

The Tenacious, skippered by Ted Turner, owner of the Atlanta Braves baseball team, was safe, the RORC reported.

The British military rescue co-ordination centre in Plymouth said the gales caused three known deaths

Grain clog given short shift by shoremen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Grain exports through this West Coast port are being delayed and grain terminal workers face layoffs as longshoremen stay away from working day shifts when they are paid only straight time, port officials say.

The officials said Tuesday the situation has resulted in an unprecedented backlog of grain cars waiting to be unloaded.

Officials of the longshoremen's union said there is a shortage of workers because of summer vacations and the problem will be eliminated by the end of the month.

Grain terminal operators said, however, that there is no shortage of longshoremen who show up for the night shift, for which they are paid at time-and-a-half rates.

Industry terminals are plugged with grain cars and ships are standing idle at their berths.

The harbormaster's office said there were 22 grain ships in port, with nine filling available berths and the others at anchor.

Grounded ferry: No malfunction

There is no evidence that mechanical failure contributed to the grounding of the ferry Queen of Alberni last week on route to Swartz Bay, B.C. Ferry Corp. officials said Tuesday.

However, they said no details of the accident will be released until an investigation by Transport Canada is completed.

The ferry is expected to be out of service service for at least a month and repairs will cost close to $1 million.

The ferry's damaged gearbox will probably have to be replaced.

The ferry was hung up on a reef in Active Pass for about 14 hours until it was pulled free by tugs.

Forest douser ablaze

A water bomber which caught fire while fighting a forest fire has caused just one more problem for the harried B.C. Forest Service.

A Canso water bomber, owned by Flying Fireman Ltd., a company that works out of Pat Bay Airport, caught fire Monday near Port Alberni. While the pilot was able to land the plane safely in nearby Sproat Lake to douse the flames, burning debris falling from the wing started some smaller fires in the woods.

The plane was under contract to the forest service and the new fires were attacked by the remaining fire bombers in the area Tuesday and brought under control, a forest service spokesman said.

A Flying Fireman spokesman said Tuesday the company was still trying to determine the cause of the fire, which broke out in the plane's right engine and caused damage to the wing and body, putting the plane out of action idefinitely.

"We've no idea what caused it—engine, electrical, or what," he said.

They hitched ride to a horror tale

By KING LEE
Colonist reporter

A plucky Victoria teenager won't come out and say she will never again hitchhike despite a nightmarish, six-day experience from which her friend is still in hospital recovering from stab wounds.

Dena Vinqvist, of 1525 Hillside, was asked point-blank Tuesday afternoon if she would ever hitchhike again.

Dena and her 17-year-old companion, Philip White, who lived in a Gorge Road apartment with a friend and also at the Vinqvist residence prior to their fateful trip, were held captive by a 38-year-old parole violator from Kingston Penitentiary after they were picked up Sunday, Aug. 5, in Sudbury, Ont.

White
. . . stabbed in lung

The drama began about 5 p.m. on the Sunday, Dena recalled. They had hitchhiked one ride earlier and were then picked up by a man in a 1970 Meteor at Sudbury.

The two teenagers had gone as far east as Kingston and were heading west at the time.

Even in retrospect, Dena said it was "hard to say" whether the man, Denis McCullough, looked dangerous. What they didn't know at the time was that McCullough had failed to return from a day parole pass that day.

There was no sign of trouble until Winnipeg, where Dena wanted to stop to purchase a gift for a girl friend.

Dena said McCullough, now in custody in Edmonton, gave them two stories.

The first was that he had been involved in a heroin ring and had to get a boat so that he could escape to an island in the South Pacific.

Later, McCullough told them the truth—that he was an escaper from Kingston Penitentiary.

"He said he wanted to be free, that's all he wanted," Dena recalled.

Then one morning, at about 1:30 when both youths were asleep, he stabbed White, puncturing a lung.

"He said it was too difficult watching two people," Dena stated when asked if there had been a reason for the stabbing.

With White lying in pain in the back seat for three or four days, the fugitive and his captives continued west, arriving at Quesnel on Saturday.

White managed to free himself and get to a Quesnel hospital where an operation was performed Monday.

Meanwhile, McCullough reversed direction and began heading east again.

With a pen in her purse and paper towels, she wrote out an appeal for help.

It was picked up by someone about 15 minutes later, and Edson RCMP were notified.

Within a half hour, a roadblock cornered McCullough, who gave up without a struggle.

Dena, who took the bus back to Victoria from Edson, said McCullough never touched her at any time.

"He was strong," she said of his muscular build, which deterred her from trying to escape.

She said that during the six days, they stopped along the roadside to go to the toilet.

Except for the last time, when she got the break she needed and made the best of it.

on land, including an eight-year-old girl dragged out to sea by heavy surf.

The Fastnet race was limited to 57 craft, three each from 19 countries. Owners of other yachts had joined for the training or adventure.

The yachts had set out Saturday from the Isle of Wight, sailed west and rounded the Fastnet Rock jutting from the sea at the southern tip of Ireland.

The boats were strung along much of the course when the storm struck.

Among those reported safe was Britain's former prime minister Edward Heath, captain of the British team in the 970-kilometre Fastnet race. His boat Morning Cloud was towed toward Falmouth, England, with a broken rudder.

Peter Jay, former British ambassador to Washington who was not involved in the race, was rescued from his catamaran in the Irish Sea.

"It was frightening," said a crew member aboard another yacht towed into port. "We saw some yachts lying on their sides, others were stern up and some gone altogether."

Among the injured was Jim Kilroy of California, captain of the yacht Kialoa. Kilroy managed to sail into Plymouth unassisted. Officials said he suffered broken ribs.

One of the missing yachts was identified as the French-registered Trantulla, spotted from a helicopter foundering in heavy seas. A race official said the boat had not been spotted since.

The yachts were caught by the gale as they rounded Fastnet Rock off southern Ireland and headed back toward the English Channel. Ships in the area reported receiving numerous emergency Mayday radio calls.

"We sent out the Mayday signal, but the radio was very weak and we didn't know if anyone was hearing us," said David Bootham, a survivor from the British boat, Magic. "The seas were the worst I have ever been in. We were floating for 10 hours until we were rescued."

The crew of another British boat, the Camargue, was pushed into the ocean by Captain Arthur Moss, then hauled to safety by a helicopter equipped with a winch.

"The idea of jumping into those huge seas was appalling," said Frank Worley. "We were all pushed in one by one by the captain."

The three dead were plucked from the sea by a Dutch Navy vessel which joined in the big search and rescue operation in an area stretching from the coast of Cornwall to southern Ireland.

Rescue officials said the over-all situation is still far from clear. Some boats still in trouble were in remote areas. But it appeared that most of the yachts affected were small craft rather than the larger international entries in the Fastnet Race.

The Bermudan entry, Condor, beat the storm-lashed seas to win the 970-kilometre Fastnet race, knocking more than seven hours off the previous record.

The 25-metre craft arrived in Plymouth, completing the round sail from Cowes, near Plymouth, to the Fastnet Rock off Ireland and back in 71 hours, 30 minutes.

The previous record was set by American Eagle in 1971, covering the tough course in 79 hours, 11 minutes.

Condor's amazing time was due to the powerful winds which battered the smaller craft.

Well over 60 yachts are so far known to have pulled out of the race, the last event in the 19-country Admiral Cup competition.

Peter Blake, Condor's skipper, said: "The winds were so strong that you could not stand up on deck. You had to lie down and crawl along the deck to get anywhere."

"The conditions were as bad as anything I have seen in the roaring forties," the dreaded band between 40 and 50 degrees south latitude around the world, said Briton Robert James, a round-the-world sailor crewing on the Condor.

Britain's sea rescue facilities were stretched to the limit, and the commander of the Royal Air Force base at Culdrose appealed for crews to return from leave to spell the exhausted men on duty.

Sketchy early reports from the coast guard and Lloyds underwriters gave this picture:

Sailor sold secrets, U.S. says

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A U.S. Navy yeoman working in the Pentagon was arrested Tuesday and charged him with espionage and stealing top-secret military documents, a U.S. justice department spokesman said.

The action against Lee Eugene Madsen is the first such charge against a member of the U.S. military in more than 10 years.

The other country or countries he allegedly sold the information to were not mentioned.

Documents sold by the seaman included a Near East and South Asia Review, selected intelligence reports and a military weekly review, the department said.

Gary Dewar, director of terminal facilities for Alberta Wheat Pool, said the situation has existed for two weeks.

Ed Isaac, manager of the city office of the Canadian Wheat Board, said only 30,000 tons of grain a day was moved in recent weeks, compared with an average of 40,000 tons a day in previous years.

Isaac said there are several ships about to go on demurrage — a form of penalty paid to the shipowners because of delays — at a cost to the wheat board of $5,000 a vessel each day.

"It's terribly frustrating," he said. "We are paying time-and-a-half to load ships at night — during the day they are sitting idle.

"We have got the grain cars, we have got the grain, but we can't get the guys to load it."

Pacific Elevators called for five longshore gangs Tuesday morning and got just one.

"We can't get gangs to work days, yet there's plenty of longshoremen coming in on the premium shift," said Dewar. "We have never experienced this problem before, except at Christmas time.

The plane was still in Sproat Lake on Monday and the company's chief engineer was there to determine how it could be repaired, he said.

Pilot Allan Zanuzoski and crew member Nigel Penn were not injured in the forced landing.

The new small fires came just before a spotty rain began falling on southern B.C., the first in a 34-day drought which set the stage for one of the busiest forest fire seasons in the province in many years.

A spokesman for the weather office said the system could bring isolated showers heavy enough to dampen some of the 450 reported fires in B.C., but the system which scattered the rain also could cause lightening storms and trigger new fires.

And the showers weren't supposed to last long, the weather office said, and sunny periods were forecast for today.

Nasal spray contraceptive

UPPSALA, Sweden (UPI) — Three doctors at the Academic Hospital said Tuesday they have invented a nasal spray birth control method for women.

Dr. Christer Berquist, a member of the team of physicians, said women simply inhale one squirt of the spray each day to prevent becoming pregnant.

Air Canada plans short-trip fare cut

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada plans to offer reduced fares on flights shorter than 1,600 kilometres, similar to the sale it is now promoting for longer North American flights.

Guy Chiasson, vice-president for passenger planning and marketing, said Tuesday that the plan would be introduced in early September and would be kept separate from the fall "seat sale" on longer-distance flights.

He said it was too early to say how many seats or what discounts would be offered.

Some 350,000 seats have been set aside on long-distance flights from Sept. 24 to Nov. 4 at reductions of 46 to 66 per cent.

"In our spring sale, we had such an overwhelming response that we had problems answering telephones," Chiasson said.

"This time, we have asked people who want to travel at discount fares to call at off-peak hours, on nights or weekends, when we aren't so busy, and most people have been quite co-operative."

"This time the response hasn't been quite as great, but we expected that because spring demand is traditionally higher than fall demand."

Chiasson said 59 per cent of reduced-fare trans-Canada seats were sold in the first 15 days.

Crosbie
. . . cites gloom

No shredding found

OTTAWA (CP) — Investigations by cabinet ministers have turned up no evidence that public servants shredded documents before the Conservative government took office after the May 22 election, a spokesman for Solicitor-General Allan Lawrence said Tuesday.

"As far as the departments are concerned, nothing untoward took place," Bill McGuffin said. "Of course, what went on in the ministers' offices was another matter."

It is usual for ministers to remove or destroy personal files when they leave office, but Conservative MP Tom Cossitt said a few days after the election that public servants were also working overtime to shred "incriminating" files.

July unemployment down to 7.2 per cent

Good news won't last

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Crosbie said Tuesday he saw little hope of keeping the unemployment rate down to its July level of 7.2 per cent much longer.

The minister said it was good news that latest unemployment figures showed the number of unsuccessful job seekers dropped in July to a nine-month low of 793,000.

But Crosbie doubted the improvement could be sustained in the face of bleak economic forecasts.

Signs of trouble were already apparent in July's figures. Windsor, home of Chrysler Canada Ltd., reported unemployment of 12.8 per cent, more than five per cent higher than the national average.

Chrysler has laid off 750 workers so far, and warned both the provincial and federal governments that many more may lose their jobs unless the company gets government help to redesign its plants to produce smaller, more fuel-efficient vehicles.

The Conference Board in Canada has predicted a year-end unemployment rate of 7.9 per cent and the government's own figures indicate the 1979 average will be in the neighborhood of eight per cent.

Liberal finance critic Herb Gray, who represents the hard-hit riding of Windsor West, called Tuesday's job figures heartening. But like Crosbie, he expects the employment situation to deteriorate in the months ahead.

He has written to Industry Minister Robert de Cotret urging that the government meet with Chrysler officials to determine practical ways to use federal funds to help the company through the hard times ahead.

Gray said the encouraging July unemployment figures could be seen partly as a reflection of policies left in place by the Liberal government, defeated at the polls May 22.

He said the Conservatives should call back Parliament earlier than their announced October resumption date to introduce new economic policies.

Speaking for the New Democratic Party, Pauline Jewett (New Westminster-Coquitlam) called the July drop in unemployment gratifying but "very temporary."

'Businesslike' tourism pushed for Cowichan

By DEREK RHIND
Colonist correspondent

DUNCAN — To profit from the untapped dormant tourism potential of the Cowichan Valley, a more businesslike approach is needed.

This is the view expressed by Cowichan Valley Economic Development Commission in its 11-page brief on tourism and development.

The CVEDC recently presented the brief to the ministry of tourism and small business, at the request of the ministry.

Economic development commissioner Austin Fraser says the Cowichan Valley Regional District as a whole needs a "major-name" accommodation facility, better access to Pacific Rim National Park from Lake Cowichan and better identification of existing tourist attractions like Shawnigan Lake.

"Vancouver Island has always been viewed in the 'quaint' context, which is used to present the city of Victoria," the brief says.

"Without detracting from this major tourist-generating centre, the commission feels that more should be done to better portray the rest of Vancouver Island and specific regions with their own unique characteristics."

The report says there is potential for greatly increased tourist travel recreation activity on the Island, which would benefit the economy.

But "a more businesslike approach should be taken toward the travel industry. It should be viewed in the same context as other business manufacturing sectors in meeting full job-creating potential, not just by attracting tourists on a year-to-year theme to take advantage of spinoff dollars," says the report.

Fraser recommends the industry get in a position to undertake long-range planning and, within reason, meet its projections in a businesslike environment.

The report says "the Cowichan Valley Regional District is situated between the growth centres of Victoria and Nanaimo, and covers an area of some 1,382 square miles, including the coastal areas of Bamberton, Mill Bay, Cowichan Bay, Genoa Bay, Maple Bay, Chemainus and Ladysmith Harbor on the east coast and the southern portion of the West Coast Trail."

The interior of the region includes Lake Cowichan, Shawnigan Lake and Quamichan Lake along with a series of well-known sports fishing rivers such as the Cowichan, Koksilah, Chemainus and others.

Included also in the region are Thetis, Kuper, Valdez and Reid Islands.

The report says the region can be readily identified as "possibly one of the most interesting, attractive and yet-untapped tourist areas of the south coastal area of the province of British Columbia and yet does not conform in some ways to traditional tourism patterns."

Along with the neglected tourism potential, the EDC report says, "possibly one of the greatest untapped resources is that of the native people.

"It seems unfair to anticipate their participation in such events as the Captain Cook Bicentenary and forget them on all the other times. Yet they, like the native peoples of other countries, can be offered many more employment opportunities."

Fraser said: "The Village Green Inn, the major facility in the region, is full throughout the summer and there is a wide variety of smaller motels and restaurants.

"But there is a perceived need to attract a major-name facility to the region, possibly at Duncan, Ladysmith and the Lake Cowichan area. This is not to mean a Hilton or Sheraton, but there is a need to establish names in the region.

"The region is totally suited to further development in the tourism sector and with the already-noted support of the local residents, there appears little reason why this should not be viewed objectively.

"There are no known areas of the region which could not either accept or benefit from recreational opportunity," says Fraser.

Other suggestions mentioned in the brief include:

- Develop proposed airport to allow "fly-in" business and recreation.
- Upgrade the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway and co-ordinate it with cruise ships docking at Port Alberni to give complete sea-land tours.
- Greater publicity be given to the different access routes to Shawnigan Lake to generate additional activity.
- Package tours to provide longer stays in the region.
- Development of Lake Cowichan as a tourist recreation centre.

The report also suggested that "a case could possibly be made to explore energy generation from forest waste in conjunction with excess needs of mills in the region."

Because "all corridors and destination areas are influenced by potential energy shortages, however, a case could possibly be made to explore energy generation from forest waste in conjunction with excess needs of mills in the region."

The report stated: "The tourism sector should remain as much as possible in the hands of private enterprise, notwithstanding the need for government assistance to stimulate growth or stabilization in some areas and the need of government to be sensitive to the need and react to potential development of natural areas."

Broken headstone marks grave in Chinese cemetery

Cemetery grass hides markers of thriving days

Colonist correspondent

NANAIMO — Centre of a once thriving Chinatown resulting from the job boom of the coal and railway companies, Nanaimo today has merely a handful of isolated Chinese-run markets and restaurants.

The sizable Chinese population of half a century ago, although mostly gone, has not been entirely forgotten as a trip to the overgrown, hillside Chinese cemetery on Townsite Road will prove.

Taking the time to wander through the knee-high shrubbery and push aside the tall grass will uncover more than 100 grave markers, some of them dating back 55 years.

Tall grass covers numerous markers

THE TOWNSITE cemetery was not the original burial ground for the Chinese residents of the community.

Around the turn of the century a local coal company donated a parcel of land on Stewart Avenue to the Chinese who used it for many years as their cemetery, and which has since been set aside as a memorial garden.

However, according to museum society director, Ed Lee, the water table of the original graveyard was unsuitably high due to a small spring running behind the land.

A MOVE to higher ground became imminent when gravediggers had to hold the coffins down with their shovels to keep them from floating up during burials.

In anticipation of this move the Chinese community, then at their hey day, initiated a fund-raising drive to raise money to purchase new land for a drier cemetery.

Every Chinese resident from Chemainus to Qualicum Beach was asked to contribute $2, and in 1924 they were able to purchase the hillside parcel near the intersection of Townsite and East Wellington Road.

THE NEWLY purchased cemetery could be used by any of the original contributors, as well as any recently arrived Chinese who paid their $2.

At present, not all of the more than 100 markers of the graveyard are actually identifying a site of the remains of the deceased.

For many years the Chinese, in accord with ancient custom, would exhume the remains of the deceased from the cemetery at seven year intervals, and ship them back to China where they could be buried in native soil.

THIS PRACTICE came to a halt near the end of the Second World War, and with the onset of Communism in China.

Forgotten by some and unknown to many, the Chinese cemetery today shows evidence of occasional visits with partially burned incense and bouquets of plastic flowers adorning certain graves.

Some members of Nanaimo's Chinese community still pay their respects to the dead on the two customary days, March 9th and September 9th.

Ed Lee is one of the faithful.

"My folks are up there and the old people still go on these day, but the young people, they forget."

Marinas score 'goofy' fish licence practices

DUNCAN — Discontented American tourists have returned to the United States scratching their heads at the difficulty in obtaining Canadian fishing licences, say Cowichan Bay marina operators.

"The main trouble is the lack of places that the American tourist can obtain a licence," said Peter Lambert, operator of Anchor Marina.

"I've had Americans tell me they contacted the federal fisheries in Ganges and were told they would have to go to Sidney to get their licence. They went to Sidney, could not get one there, so they came to Cowichan Bay and were told by fisheries officers that they would have to go to Nanaimo. After this run-around which took four days, they went back to the states in disgust.

"If we continue this type of practice we are not going to have any American tourists coming here at all."

Lambert said the marina operators had written to former fisheries minister Jack Davis, informing him that the marina operators would be quite willing to sell the licences at no cost to the federal government, "but we were turned down flat."

"They are just not interested in having commercial companies selling fishing licences," said Lambert.

"The marinas would be the most logical place to sell licences as they are open for the most part from dawn to almost midnight for seven days of the week, unlike the office hours kept by most government departments," he said.

Lambert said, "If you go to the fisheries office in Duncan there's no one there, because the officers are usually out on patrol. There is no way they can be selling licences."

Bob Parmenter, operator of Pier 66 marina, agreed with Lambert. He said, "This is a perennial problem. We have a goofy system for licensing Americans in the first place.

"The feds are currently considering a lot of revisions concerning licensing. But how soon they will be implemented, heaven only knows.

"We've offered to sell licences, but they (fisheries) don't seem to want this.

Lloyd Newcombe, operator of Bluenose Marina, said, "As far as I'm concerned the federal fisheries are a joke. They waste their time playing Dick Tracy, rather than doing their job.

"They are certainly not looking for tourists, or trying to help the fish, or the fishermen.

"The licences should be sold by a marina operator who's open from daylight to dark, not someone open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

"We've written to fisheries about this. But we received no response whatsoever. They are just a joke."

Federal fisheries officer Gordon McEachen told the Colonist the main place for American tourists entering waters in the area is at Bedwell Harbor on Pender Island.

He said they can obtain a licence from the Bedwell Harbor resort.

"We issue them with the licences and they pay us the money they have collected.

"There are two more resorts on Pender Island where licences can be obtained, at Port Browning and at Hope Bay. They are both resorts and they can sell licences."

He said licences could not be obtained in Sidney, but they were available at the federal fisheries office in Victoria and in Duncan.

McEachen admitted that the Duncan office representative was on duty only from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m., adding, "she has been on her holidays for the last few weeks."

McEachen said, "The marina operators could apply to our licensing department of the federal government to be allowed to sell licences.

"If the marinas have the facilities I would assume they would be approved. I don't see why they would not be. I'm not sure of all the standards, but if we have resorts selling them, why not marinas," said McEachen.

SUSPENSION SPARKS SIT-IN

NANAIMO — The suspension of a Nanaimo Regional General Hospital worker for refusing to go on a garbage pickup detail resulted in a sit-in by about 35 of his fellow housekeeping workers at the hospital Tuesday.

A member of Local 180, B.C. Hospital Employees Union, said the sit-in was to protest the treatment of the man by the hospital management. The union member, who refused to be identified, said the man involved was a senior member of the housekeeping staff and believed he was not required to do the work of junior worker.

David Mortensen, director of personnel at the hospital, said he requested the staff to go back to work until talks could be arranged to settle the matter. He said work at the hospital was going on normally.

Account started to help refugees

CAMPBELL RIVER — People interested in sponsoring Vietnamese refugees have met for a third time and started a bank account.

About 40 people attended a meeting in St. Patrick's parish hall.

The result was that formal sponsorship agreements have been requested from federal immigration department officials.

A group of 25 people pledged $40 a month for one year to help the refugees.

The money will be placed in the Bank of Commerce and called the Sponsoring Fund.

A tag day was held Aug. 11.

Proceeds were for emergency work in the refugee camps and on the boats through the Development and Peace organization.

Meanwhile, the Canadian Red Cross has now collected more than $193,000 for boat people living in refugee camps in Southeast Asia.

The amount represents about 40 per cent of the $500,000, which is the national target.

Robert Whyte, president of the B.C.-Yukon Division of the Red Cross, said assistance had been provided for boat people since 1975 but it was only now that the effort wasbeing realized.

North Island to celebrate Filomi Days

PORT HARDY — Residents from here and other North Island areas will join in celebrating Filomi Days this weekend.

To help with the Friday-to-Sunday celebrations, council has given a grant of $1,000.

The money will be used to help cover the estimated $2,350 cost of the celebration.

Some of the expensive items which face the committee are advertising, an air display, salmon purchases and permits.

SOME MONEY is expected to be raised through a 10-percent levy charged to service clubs and a salmon barbecue.

Meanwhile, in Port McNeill, a request for regional district support for a TV cablevision licence application was tabled.

The motion to table was made in order for Mt. Waddington regional directors to study the actual application.

The application for a licence was from Beejay Ventures and Selkirk Cablevision.

The application outlines a proposed expansion to a six-channel cable service in Port Hardy and Port McNeill.

ONE OF THE channels would be open to all organizations for input and for news, much like a community channel, according to Peter Johnson, who wrote the letter which requested the support.

Also in Port McNeill, three pesticide permits have been granted MacMillan Bloedel and all were unopposed.

The permit allows the use of 2½ pounds of Tordon 22-K on five acres in the Benson River drainage.

The other permits allow the use of about 40 pounds of 2,4-D on about 60 acres in the Benson River drainage.

The application will be by the manual hack and squirt method, according to the permits.

Four rescuers given awards

DUNCAN — Four Cowichan Valley residents were honored for bravery, by the Royal Canadian Human Association, at a brief ceremony held recently in North Cowichan municipal chambers.

Steven Kirkpatrick, Terry Kirkpatrick, Leah Whitefield and Shelia Whitefield, all of Duncan, were each presented with the Bravery Award of Merit by RCMP Inspector Bruce Terkelson.

Mill workers walk off job

NANAIMO (CP) — About 200 day shift workers at MacMillan Bloedel's Harmac pulp mill walked off the job Tuesday morning to protest the suspension of tradesmen for refusing to man forklift trucks.

The walkout followed a motion recently approved by members of Local 8, Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada, that the forklifts would in future be manned only by yard employees.

The tradesmen, who had operated the forklifts in the past, refused to handle them Tuesday and were suspended by mill management.

"A gradual walkout of day shift workers followed and we anticipate that as the day goes on the walkout will be complete," a management spokesman said.

Union spokesman were not available for comment.

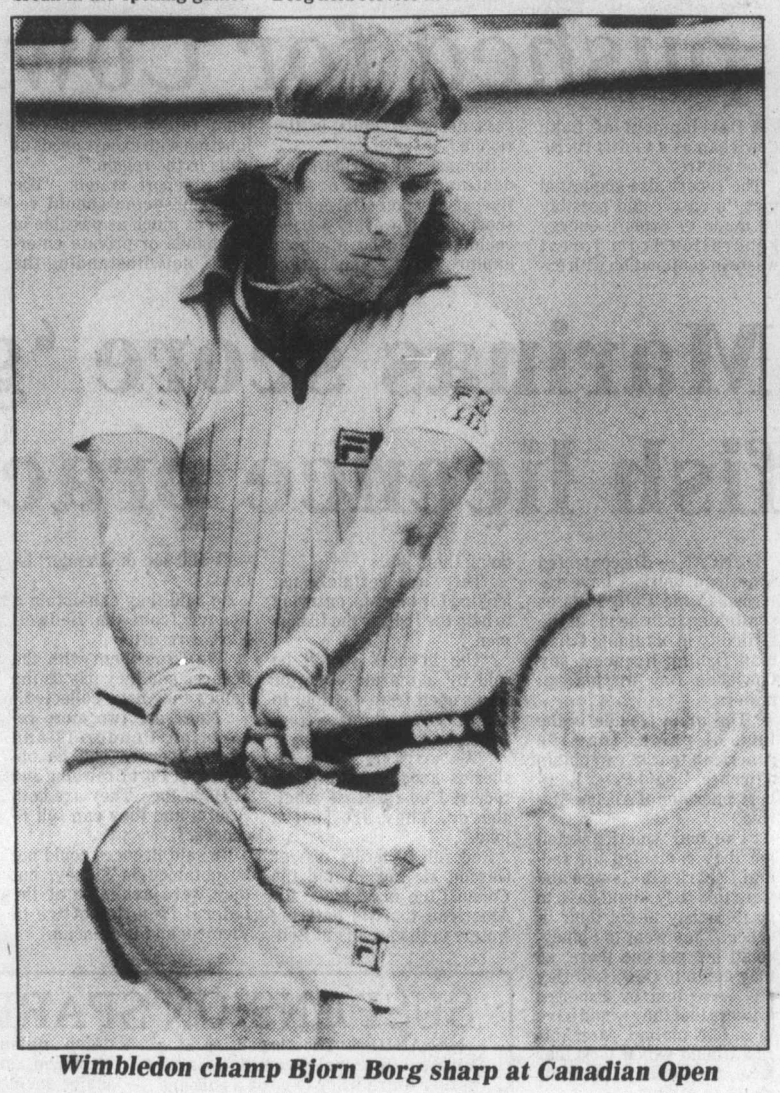
TORONTO (CP) — Wimbledon champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden ended a three-week layoff with an easy 6-2, 6-4 win over Bruce Manson of the United States in a first-round match Tuesday at the Canadian Open tennis championships.

Borg, whose only loss this year in the first round of any tournament was at the hands of Manson, made no mistake this time around in dominating the American in a strong wind at the York University tennis centre.

"If feels good after being off for three weeks," Borg said. "The conditions were difficult for both of us."

Borg broke Manson's service in the third and fifth games of the opening set, then went ahead 2-0 in the deciding set after a service break in the opening game.

Manson broke Borg for the only time in the match with the Swede leading 5-3, but Borg held service in the next game to take the match and advance to the second round against Ivan Molina of Colombia.



Wimbledon champ Bjorn Borg sharp at Canadian Open

In other first-round men's play, unseeded Phil Dent of Australia upset third-seeded Roscoe Tanner of the U.S. 6-7, 7-6, 6-3; fifth-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina downed John Austin of the U.S. 6-1, 6-4; fourth-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis of the U.S. beat Mark Cox of Britain 6-4, 6-3; Tomaz Smid beat junior Martin Wostenholme of Ottawa 6-3, 6-3 and Gene Mayer of the U.S. beat Dale Power of Ottawa 6-1, 6-1.

In the only women's singles match of the day, top-seeded Evonne Goolagong posted an easy 6-1, 6-2 win over Brenda Perry of New Zealand.

Borg said he plans to take a week off before playing the U.S. Open at Flushing Meadows, N.Y., in two weeks. He's been practicing four or five hours a day for the last five days to prepare for this tournament.

"I knew I had to play well because earlier this year I lost to him," Borg said. "We both play a lot from the base line."

"I was confident I could beat him again," Manson said. "I went out and tried to play steady and force him to make mistakes. He didn't."

Dent called his victory over the hard-serving Tanner "my first decent win in a long time, a year maybe."

"I just tried not to make too many errors."

In the first-round women's doubles match, Betsy Nagelsen of the U.S. and Renata Tomanova of Czechoslovakia downed Marjorie Blackwood of Ottawa and Lise Senn of Toronto 6-3, 6-4.

In another women's doubles match, JoAnne Russell of the U.S. and countrywoman Janet Newberry defeated Julie Harrington of the U.S. and Nina Bland of Victoria 6-1, 6-3.

Mussels move up

Gary Ledbetter cracked a pair of two-run homers and Tom Candiatti pitched a five-hitter as the Mussels opened a two-game set at Bellingham with a 6-3 victory.

Mussels went into the contest 4½ games behind Walla Walla Padres who were to meet the Mets at Grays Harbor.

Ledbetter gave the Mussels a 2-0 lead with a home run in the second inning and he hit his fifth home run as a Mussel in the four-run fifth inning.

'Bring on 'Bellies' — Irish

The defending Western Lacrosse Association champions lead the Salmonbellies 3-1 in the best-of-seven semi-final and host the fifth game 8 p.m. at Memorial Arena.

The other semi-final is squared at 2-2 as the Vancouver Burrards surprised the Coqutilam Adanacs 16-9 Tuesday at Kerrisdale Arena.

The best-of-seven final will start Monday with the Shamrocks, if they win, the home team.

Other final dates are Aug. 22, 24, 25 and if necessary Aug. 28, 29 and 30.

The Mann Cup is in the West this year and the Shamrocks are hoping to be home team for that best-of-seven series which will be played Sept. 4, 5, 7, 8 and if necessary 10, 12 and 13.

Shamrocks general manager Leon Hall said the team came out unscathed from the 18-10 win at New Westminster Monday and are injury free heading into tonight's contest.

Goaltender Larry Smeltzer, the standout of the series to date, was given a bit of a rest in the third period Monday but will be back between the pipes tonight.

The Shamrocks have outscored New Westminster 54-37 in the series and have a 29-14 edge at Memorial Arena.

Goss said following Monday's loss that Smeltzer had many of the Salmonbellies thinking he's unbeatable but added that if they keep running and shooting for the corners they'll eventually get to the Shamrock netminder.

Smeltzer gave credit to his defence and Hall said the Shamrocks checked well and stayed with a running game throughout.

Medals to Tobacco, Fougner

B.C. hoopsters still unbeaten

SASKATOON (CP) — B.C. and Saskatchewan remained undefeated in women's basketball after early games Tuesday as the Western Canada Summer Games entered its second day of competition.

Saskatchewan downed Manitoba 71-65 Tuesday and B.C. bested Alberta 60-52. Monday, B.C. beat Manitoba 69-53 and Saskatchewan topped Alberta 66-50.

Men's and women's basketball is a round-robin competition that reaches gold-medal play tonight.

Organizers estimated more than 6,000 spectators watched Games events Monday. They saw Alberta take eight gold medals, B.C. seven and Manitoba three. Manitoba gained its third medal after fencing results finally were announced early Tuesday.

B.C. ran its gold-medal total to 10 with three victories in canoeing Tuesday afternoon.

Gold medals are awarded first-place competitors. All other participants are given achievement awards for earning the right to be at the Games, held every four years for Western Canadian athletes of potential international calibre.

Later in the evening, Victoria athletes came up big in track and field.

Judy Tobacco ran a time of 54.73 seconds to capture firdt -place in the women's 400 metres while Brent Fougner took the men's triple jump with a distance of 15.41 metres.

Cheryl Noble of Victoria was fifth in the 400 metres, with a time of 55.99, while Wendy Davies was sixth in the 100m-hurdles at 15.90. While Saskatchewan went wanting in the first day of competition Monday, Alberta showed most its strength in track and field, taking seven of medals there. The eighth came in canoeing after a Manitoba team had to scratch and B.C. was disqualified. Saskatchewan had not entered the race.

B.C. defeated Alberta 2-1 in field hockey but lost 1-0 to Saskatchewan.

B.C.'s water-polo team edged Saskatchewan 8-7 and doubled Manitoba 16-7.

She was part of a team which placed four in the K4 500.

In track and field, Anne Webster of Victoria was third in the 3,000 metres. Her time was 9:59.7.

tom keyser

One otherwise nondescript spring day in the foggy ruins of time, an otherwise nondescript little kid opened a package of gum and cards.

Brushing away the bubblegum dust, pink and aromatic, he beheld a sight of considerable wonder: Andy Carey, an otherwise nondescript third-baseman for the New York Yankees, resplendent in pinstripes, hefting lumber.

Rockets exploded in the little kid's head, between chaws of that sickeningly sweet gum. It was really neat. You could call it love.

Ever since that balmy morning in a Burnaby schoolyard, I have been a devotee of the sport Carey played for so long with such commendable mediocrity — baseball.

As a youth, I crept off to Vancouver's Capilano Stadium whenever possible, sitting in the 50-cent bleachers along first base. I thrilled to the heroics of luminaries like Chet Nichols, Lenny Green, Woody Huyke, Jim Driscoll, Charlie White, Sal Bando and Howie Goss, Vancouver Mounties all. I even saw Brooks Robinson once.

You are reading the confessions of one of the few living humans to ever attend a home game of the New Westminster Frasers. But the Frasers tested the patience of even devoted afficionados.

Like the Arabs, the Frasers folded their tents and stole quietly away after one season. Their attendance was poorest in the league.

Something there is about the baseball maniac that forces him to live and die with his team, to hang on every word of news, every trivial statistic relating to his heros.

So it is in Victoria. But, apparently, baseball addicts represent a microscopic colony on this temperate, recreation paradise of the Pacific.

They don't make bubblegum cards of Class-A ballplayers. Maybe that's the reason.

Whatever, Victoria won't have Jim and Lynn Chapman to kick around any more. The well-meaning, underfinanced and inexperienced brothers are going back to the mainland with their tails between their legs.

After taking a financial bath they couldn't afford, the Chapmans woke up one fine morning and announced: "Enough."

Better late than never. The brothers have had it.

Take heart, all ye who worship the horsehide.

Richmond has heard of the New Westminster Frasers. He knows all about the tribulations suffered by the Chapmans in Victoria.

He remains undaunted.

Like a true baseball nut, Richmond has a blind side where his game is concerned. So, apparently, do interests here in Canada, down in California and even somewhere in Ohio.

These interests, as yet anonymous, represent groups literally breaking down Richmond's door. Why? To keep baseball in Victoria, that's why.

The devil, you say?

Richmond blithely asserts, nay insists, the Northwest League will be back in business at Royal Athletic Park next summer.

Never mind the pitiful attendance, the apathy. Never mind that it may be hard convincing the city to go for another summer of practically giving their park rental away.

Never mind that this is a city of retired admirals, active yachters, retired militiamen, active churchgoers, retired millionaires and active nature lovers — and very few fans of minor league baseball.

Never mind that people can make the short trip to Seattle or Vancouver and see major-league sport of every variety.

Forget all that. The Northwest League is coming back.

"All that franchise needs is better promotion," argues Richmond. He cites the Eugene Emeralds, the league's flagship.

Under the direction of experienced management, plus the security of a major league player-development contract, the Emeralds flourish. They draw an average of more than 1,000 fans a night. The Mussels average around 200.

Apparently he's learned a few tricks.

Well, let's wait and see. It's hard to believe businessmen with real dollars on the line would take another flyer on a two-time loser like Victoria.

I, for one, am pulling for them. As the hardball-happy protaganist of the early passages of this piece, the runny-nosed tyke who fell head over heels for Andy Carey, I'll show up at the park once in a while.

But (if Richmond isn't just talking through his PR-man's hat) maybe that tiny little group of fanatics and I'll be the only ones there.

Willock well back

CHUR, Switzerland — Bernie Willock of Victoria finished 87th in a field of 96 cyclists in Tuesday's second stage of the 16-country William Tell Grand Priz invitational seven-day road race.

Team-mate Pierre Harvey of Montreal placed 33rd, finishing the 133.5-kilometre stage Burglen to Chur in three hours, 40 minutes 46 seconds, 10:35 behind the winner, world champion Richard Trinkler of Switzerland.

Victoria still alive

Brian Martin pitched a two-hitter for Victoria and Clay Bertoia and Darrell Richardson had three hits each.

Today Victoria, which has lost once in the double-knockout tournament, plays the loser of the winners' bracket final between Washington and Oregon.

Seniors all even

Lumberworld and Farmers Construction are all even in the Senior Amateur Baseball League playoffs and have a week to prepare for their next meeting.

Mike Squire pitched a six-hitter and Mike Laffin had two hits and drove in three runs Tuesday as Lumberworld defeated Farmers 9-3 at Lambrick Park and tied the best-of-five series at 1-1.

The third game isn't until Aug. 22 as several players from both teams will travel with the Victoria All-Stars to the Canadian senior "B" championships at Lloydminster, Sask.

Red-hot Fred sparks Red Sox

Boston Red Sox last went to the world series in 1975, the year a rookie named Fred Lynn was named most valuable player in the American League.

Lynn is doing even better in 1979 and giving the Red Sox a big boost in the Eastern Division title race.

The Boston centrefielder drove in six runs with his 33rd and 34th home runs and a double Tuesday as the Red Sox belted Minnesota Twins 12-1 at Fenway Park.

Carlton Fisk and Carl Yastrzemski also homered in a 19-hit attack against three Minnesota pitchers, while Boston hurlers Dennis Eckersley, Bob Stanley and Bill Campbell combined for a six-hitter.

In 1975, Lynn led the league in doubles with 47, hit 21 home runs and batted .331 and added rookie-of-the-year honors to the MVP award.

He was three-for-four Tuesday and boosted his league-leading average to .338 and his two homers put him three ahead of team-mate Jim Rice.

The Red Sox nailed down the decision quickly on solo homers by Fisk, his eighth, Yastrzemski, his 19th and 402nd of his career, and Lynn in the first as Minnesota starter Pete Redfern was shelled after throwing only 12 pitches.

Eckersley allowed only three singles in six innings, but with Boston far in front he was given a rest. In earning his eighth consecutive victory, Eckersley became the American League's first 16-game winner. He has lost five.

Boston remained five games behind Baltimore Orioles who edged visiting Chicago White Sox 2-1 on Al Bumbry's bases-loaded, two-out single in the 12th inning.

In National League highlights, Philadelphia Phillies and Montreal Expos fell further behind first-place Pittsburgh Pirates.

Cincinnati Reds edged the Phillies 2-1 in 10 innings while Houston Astros got by Montreal 2-1 and Pittsburgh thumped San Diego Padres 7-1.

Pitcher Joaquin Andujar hit Houston's first home run at the Astrodome since July 15 to give Houston the win. Andjar nailed a two-run, inside-the-park shot in the second inning and went on to pitch a four-hitter for his career high 12th victory.

Provincial court

One of three youths jointly charged with robbery with threats of violence was denied bail Tuesday by Judge Fred Giles in Victoria provincial court.

Ordered detained in custody was 18-year-old Ronald Hamer, of 1119 McBrier. Nineteen-year-olds Keith McKenzie, of 1340 Sussex, and Alan Peirson, of 3249 Doncaster, were released on their own recognizance.

They were charged in connection with an incident shortly after midnight Monday in which a man was robbed of $60 in the 1300 block Government.

All three were remanded until Thursday for election of their trial method.

A 44-YEAR-OLD inmate of Snowden River prison camp near Campbell River was given an additional two months in jail after pleading guilty to being unlawfully at large for 16 days last month.

Crown counsel Richard Law told the court Ronald Charles Woods was on a temporary absence pass from the forestry camp on July 7 but failed to turn up at a gas station where he was to be picked up for a ride back. Woods turned himself in at Wilkinson Road jail in Saanich on July 23.

He was serving a sentence of two years less a day imposed Jan. 16 this year in Victoria for robbery and theft under $200.

Woods said he phoned July 7 and told authorities he was having trouble making it back to the camp and requested they get him. He said he waited an hour and a half before deciding to go down to Victoria because he "had something to do."

Sharon Darlene Hansen, 37, of 2605 Blanshard, is charged with causing bodily harm with intent to wound, maim or disfigure as well as attempted murder in connection with an Aug. 4 incident.

She was released on her own recognizance in the sum of $5,000, and one of the conditions was that she reside at the Eric Martin Institute while on bail.

A trial date of Sept. 13 was set by Giles.

JUDGE BLAKE ALLAN imposed an 18-month jail sentence on a 26-year-old man who was found guilty of indecently assaulting a 15-year-old girl July 6.

Russell Michael Amos, of 485 Island Highway, was also placed on two years' probation.

He was convicted of attacking the young girl, who was intoxicated to the point of unconsciousness, in bushes at Centennial Square.

A 35-YEAR-OLD Sidney man was given 30 days after conviction on a charge of resisting a peace officer in the execution of his duties.

Stanley Arthur Belcourt, of 9724 Fourth Street, had also been charged with assaulting Constable Burt Allison of the Sidney RCMP outside the Golden Bear Tavern, 2280 Beacon Avenue, on Jan. 13, but Allan found him not guilty on that count.

Allison's testimony was that Belcourt came out of the pub with two full glasses of beer and, when told to empty the glass on the ground, poured out the beer and then smashed the glasses on the pavement. The officer said he then arrested Belcourt for being intoxicated in a public place and, as he was about to place him in the police vehicle, was struck on the side of his head by Belcourt.

Belcourt, who had previous convictions for impaired driving, failing to remain at the scene of an accident, refusing a breath test demand, theft, attempted theft, manslaughter, causing a disturbance, resisting arrest, wilful damage, and assault causing bodily harm, testified he remembered events vaguely owing to intoxication, but accused police of beating him in the detachment parking lot.

A 30-DAY sentence was imposed on 32-year-old Donald Stanley McNabb of 1434 Vining.

The dangerous driving charge involved an accident at Springfield and Wilson, in which a witness told police McNabb was going about 80 kmh in a 50-kmh zone, went out of control after going over railway tracks, and hit a parked car.

The other charge also involved an accident, Law said.

McNabb had a previous conviction for impaired driving, on Aug. 26, 1977, when he was fined $500.

McNabb said he was an unemployed father of three on unemployment insurance benefits and unable to pay a fine.

FINED $250 for having care and control of a vehicle while having a blood-alcohol reading over .08 was 20-year-old Maurice Coderre of 441 Vincent.

Doctors' war centered in B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Angry denunciations are flying between two camps of B.C. doctors warring over whether a conservative or militant reformer will represent them as president of the Canadian Medical Association.

The reform group is pushing for "patient participation" (payments by patients in addition to that provided by government health care).

In the process, more than harsh words are being traded. Dr. Peter Banks of Victoria, a prominent spokesman for the conservatives, said he recently received from an anonymous colleague an envelope that contained a rubber finger sheath used in rectal examinations stuffed with human feces.

The dispute centres around the B.C. Medical Association's nomination for president of the national association, a prerogative that comes with the province's turn to act as host for the 1980 national convention.

PHYSICIAN, HEAL THAT FOREST FIRE

Railway workers and physicians are just like anyone else when it comes to fighting forest fires, according to Langford forest ranger Bruce Holloway.

The Colonist reported Sunday that forest service officers can conscript the services of anyone between the ages of 18 and 80 to fight a forest fire, except that physicians, some railway personnel, the physically unfit and some others were excluded.

That, Holloway says, was in an old version of the Forest Act. The new act excludes only the physically unfit, and those under 19, and reads in Section 124(1): "Where ordered to do so by a regional manager, a forest officer authorized by him, or a peace officer, (a) a person shall provide appropriate equipment he owns or has the use of, and (b) a person who is 19 or older and fit to do so, shall assist in controlling and extinguishing a forest fire."

The exceptions listed in the previous Forest Act have been eliminated in the new version.

Woodworkers out

Pickets block Interior mills

The action followed an adjournment in talks to Friday between the North Cariboo Forest Relations Association and negotiators for 5,000 northern Interior woodworkers.

Pickets were up at the Canim Lake sawmill northwest of 100 Mile House and at the Pinette and Therrien mill and the West Fraser Planer operation, both in Williams Lake.

In addition, the Ainsworth Lumber mill in Lone Butte near 100 Mile House was behind a picket line as was 100 Mile Cedar Products.

Martin McLeod, a spokesman for Canim Lake sawmill, said pickets at that operation were not set up by the 500 union members employed at the mill.

He said the pickets are members of the International Woodworkers of America from a nearby mill. The Canim Lake mill, owned by Weldwood Canada, negotiates separately with the industry.

The northern Interior contract with the IWA expires Aug. 30. The union has said it has been offered only portions of an agreement signed recently by coastal and southern Interior members.

About 38,000 coast and southern Interior woodworkers approved a two-year agreement last month that provided an increase of 90 cents an hour in the first year and an increase of 9.5 per cent or 90 cents an hour, whichever is greater, in the second. The old base rate was $8.16 an hour.

The university grad: he's more employable

By PAUL De GROOT
Colonist reporter

The unemployed Ph.D., the unemployable teacher, and the tradesman who does better than the university grad are largely myths, according to the head of the University of Victoria's counselling centre.

While each of them may exist in certain cases, the statistics show that university graduates consistently participate in the work force more frequently, have lower rates of unemployment, and more demanding jobs than those whose educational levels are less, Dr. Ace Beach said in an interview Monday.

A recent survey showed that only eight per cent of the University of Victoria's 1978 graduates were still unemployed last spring, and of those, 30 per cent would not, or could not, leave Victoria to find jobs, Beach said.

What makes the university graduate more employable than other groups is often the much-maligned "general education," rather than training in any special field.

"What university does is first provide a general education that enables a person to read and write and think better. The generalist can do a variety of jobs. That is certainly rather important, not only for employment, but also for living."

Backing that up is research which shows that most university graduates are not employed in the field in which they majored in university. Many education graduates, for instance, are employed in fields other than teaching.

Also, the unemployment rate for those with post-secondary certificates or diplomas is higher than for university graduates, in spite of the fact that their educations are targeted at a particular, practical field. This indicates that specialized training is no guarantee of a job, and can in fact limit the individual's choice of careers, Beach says.

Education and unemployment

Source: Statistics Canada

Educational level	Unemployment rate (%)
Elementary or less	9.6
High school	9.5
post-sec. certificate or diploma	5.9
university degree	3.8

Education and participation rate

Educational level	Participation in work force (%)
Elementary or less	45
High school	65

How about high unemployment among university graduates, such as the 18 per cent unemployed from the 1978 University of B.C. architecture program? Just remember that unemployment among those graduates' colleagues in most of the construction trades is higher than that, in some cases approaching 50 per cent, Beach said.

Another measure of the value of a university education is the "participation rate," the proportion of any group which is participating in the work force (it eliminates from the statistics not only those who are unemployed, but those who do not want to be employed or have roles, such as housewives, which do not show up as employment in the statistics). The participation rate is more a measure of how valuable an education is to society than to an individual, because it shows how "productive" people are. Here the evidence is that "education tends to put people into a productive role," Beach says.

What about life-time earnings? Can the skilled tradesman who begins working at 18 make more before retirement than the university graduate who must pay tuition, room and board at university, and not enter the work force until a minimum of four years later?

The statistics are "contaminated" on this, Beach says, because it is impossible to dissociate the generally higher socio-economic background of most university students from their eventual careers. If your parents are middle class and well-off, your chances of ending up with a good job are better than those of someone from a poor family, regardless of education, and the fact is that a disproportionate number of university students come from middle-class or wealthier families. But what evidence there is suggests that university graduates are maintaining their traditional edge in life-time earnings over non-university graduates, Beach said.

In addition, university graduates are more likely to get better jobs, and to move up to better jobs, than their non-university counterparts. A survey last spring found that 74 per cent of UVic's 1978 graduates, and 83 per cent of its 1973 graduates had jobs which required at least some post-secondary education.

Beach admits that a university degree does not confer the instant status that it once did. In the late 1960s, he notes, most graduates had half a dozen job offers to choose from when they graduated, but in the early 1970s Canada's universities finally managed to fill the demand for graduates, and the number of jobs available more closely matched the number of graduates.

Nevertheless, the jobs are there, even for teachers, generally considered to be in one of the tightest fields around. Beach has gathered statistics showing that B.C. school districts hired nearly 3,500 new teachers in 1978, but the three B.C. universities graduated only 2,100.

In spite of this, the provincial government is warning that the education faculties are turning out too many teachers.

A follow-up of education graduates shows that the situation is not that bad. Only three per cent of the 1977 education graduates from UVic were unemployed last spring, and only 5.4 per cent of the 1978 grads. For UBC graduates, a remarkable 99.9 per cent of the 1977 education graduates were employed the same year they got their degrees, although not all of them in education.

Teaching gets a lot of attention because jobs are extremely scarce in the major metropolitan areas where people prefer to work.

While unemployment remains high, and the number of women moving into the work force expands rapidly (the participation rate for women doubled between 1973 and 1977), opportunities remain for the future, Beach said, citing an Ontario study which showed that 73 per cent of the skilled technicians in southern Ontario were foreign born and trained, and 87 per cent were over the age of 40. Many of them had entered Canada at a time when its own educational system was not capable of keeping up with the demand for skilled workers.

Offers for old library at hand

Decision time on the choosing of a proposal for use of the Carnegie library building is at hand for Victoria aldermen.

Council will meet in special session Friday to consider numerous propcsals, Mayor Michael Young said Monday.

The building will be vacated early next year when the Greater Victoria Public Library moves into its new quarters, the provincial governmemt building on Broughton Street.

Nearly 50 submissions have been received by council for use of the library building at Blanshard and Yates, including an offer to purchase the Carnegie portion for $350,000.

Paul Kyle, of Kyle's Gallery, bid $350,000 to buy the Carnegie portion.

Young said that Westcoast Savings Credit Union made a separate proposal to negotiate for the use of both portions of the building to combine its head office and a branch service.

Hearings curb linked to E&N

The kind of public hearings that saved the life of Vancouver Island's Esquimalt and Nanaimo Dayliner service could be seriously curtailed by plans that are reportedly being proposed in Ottawa, E&N Steering Committee chairman John Cooper said Monday.

"It would put power in the hands of the bureaucrats to make whatever decisions they wanted," Cooper said following a joint statement by the Canadian Railway Labor Association, the Consumers' Association of Canada and Transport 2000 alleging that the transport ministry wants a Via Rail Act that would reduce the power of the Canadian Transport Commission.

The three groups said in their statement they had "learned" Transport Canada was proposing sweeping reorganization of the corporate and regulatory framework under which Via Rail operates.

They said the ministry is recommending legislation incorporating provisions "which would substantially reduce the power of the Canadian Transport Commission to decide, through the public hearing process, questions relating to the quality and frequency and discontinuation of passenger rail service."

Cooper, whose committee played a leading role in bringing about a second CTC hearing and reversing what would have been a death sentence for the little dayliner, said Monday he had been told the three organizations based their statement on "leaked" official information in Ottawa.

He believes the success of the E&N fight might be responsible for any present plans to change the system. Other hearings across the country have followed the E&N case and decisions are pending, Cooper said.

Harry Gow, president of Transport 2000, says in the joint statement that "in times of increasing openness of government it would be inconsistent to remove consideration of such major issues from the public forum and to hand it over to the bureaucracy."

"Although Transport Canada documents do not set out the precise legislative amendments sought, they indicated that Transport Canada is aiming at a massive curtailment of passenger rail service," the statement says.

Tory MP Duncan Beattie

Karate-expert Steve Beattie

Triple-slayer changes mind, begs for life

Pro-death MP: 'I love' brother

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — Triple murderer Steve Beattie begged a judge to sentence him to death after a jury found him guilty. Now he has changed his mind.

"Even the worst man has the right to life," Beattie said. "Only God can take a life."

The 37-year-old karate expert — a death row prisoner at Florida State Prison near Starke for seven months — made the statement Monday after his brother — a Canadian MP — said he favors the death penalty and will vote to restore capital punishment when the issue comes up in Parliament.

DUNCAN BEATTIE, 50-year-old Tory MP for Hamilton Mountain, said he will not avoid the issue even though his brother has been sentenced to die in the electric chair in Florida.

"I still believe in the death penalty though I love him very much,' Beattie said in an interview with CBC television.

Stephen Beattie, whose sentence is automatically appealed under Florida's death penalty law, also was interviewed by the CBC. He said he understands his brother's position but does not agree with him.

"It's legalized murder, that's what it is is — premieditated, legalized murder," he said.

THE CONDEMNED man said there is always the possibility an innocent man will be executed. He said evidence used to convict him could not have been used in Canada or Europe.

Beattie, was convicted of killing his business partner, John Mitchell and cleaning women Patricia Beck, 18, and Carol Raduazzo, 34.

The three were found shot to death at the World of Health Spa in North Miami Beach on July 23, 1978. Mitchell and Steve Beattie were co-owners of the spa.

The strongest evidence against Beattie was a fingerprint lifted from the leg of one of the cleaning women. Experts testified the print belonged to Beattie.

BEATTIE, BORN IN Scotland, moved to Canada with his father, a professional fighter, when he was seven. He came to Miami in the early 1960s.

He held a number of jobs: working as abouncer for a Miami club, a boxing manager and fight promoter and sometimes as a bodyguard for visiting celebrities, such as Elvis Presley. He also taught karate.

Duncan Beattie, was first elected to the House of Commons in 1972, was defeated in 1976 but re-elected this year.

114 rescued from storm

Colonist wire services

PLYMOUTH, England — Storm-crippled yachts limped or were towed into port in Ireland and southwestern England early today as the death toll mounted in the biggest yacht racing disaster in history.

At least 10 yachtsmen were reported dead, seven were missing and hundreds more were unaccounted for as ships, lifeboats and helicopters searched the Atlantic through the night for victims of 120-kilometre-an-hour gales which turned the classic Fastnet ocean race into a desperate fight for survival.

The Royal Ocean Racing Club, sponsors of the race, said most of those not heard from were expected to be out of danger as winds subsided.

The club said about 30 yachts were sunk or abandoned, 114 persons were rescued and about another 100 boats were safe.

Canadian boats safe

Two of the the three official Canadian challengers in the 970-kiiometre (605-mile) classic climax to the Admiral's Cup series were among the craft reported to have reached safety.

The RORC said that Pachena, skippered by John Newton of the Vancouver Yacht Club, sought shelter in Cork, Ireland, and Evergeen, skippered by Don Green of the Royal Hamilton Yacht Club, retired from the race and put into Plymouth.

The third yacht, Magistri, skippered by Charles Bentley of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, Toronto, was reported to have been sighted by search aircraft and was apparently continuing the race.

A fourth Canadian yacht, Manitou, skippered by Ken Merrow, formerly of Oakville, Ont., also started the race but pulled out early with a damaged mast and returned to Cowes, on the Isle of Wight.

Mayor William Vogel of the Vancouver suburb of Surrey was reported aboard the British yacht Jaujaime, owned by construction magnate Sir Maurice Laing. A crew member who stayed ashore during the race told a Vancouver radio station that the yacht had been sighted by the Royal Navy and he assumed those on board were in good condition.

Among craft unaccounted for were the three official U.S. entries — Imp, Aries and Williwaw — and a training vessel from the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., with 14 crew aboard.

The Tenacious, skippered by Ted Turner, owner of the Atlanta Braves baseball team, was safe, the RORC reported.

The British military rescue co-ordination centre in Plymouth said the gales caused three known deaths

Grain clog given short shift by shoremen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Grain exports through this West Coast port are being delayed and grain terminal workers face layoffs as longshoremen stay away from working day shifts when they are paid only straight time, port officials say.

The officials said Tuesday the situation has resulted in an unprecedented backlog of grain cars waiting to be unloaded.

Officials of the longshoremen's union said there is a shortage of workers because of summer vacations and the problem will be eliminated by the end of the month.

Grain terminal operators said, however, that there is no shortage of longshoremen who show up for the night shift, for which they are paid at time-and-a-half rates.

Industry terminals are plugged with grain cars and ships are standing idle at their berths.

The harbormaster's office said there were 22 grain ships in port, with nine filling available berths and the others at anchor.

Grounded ferry: No malfunction

There is no evidence that mechanical failure contributed to the grounding of the ferry Queen of Alberni last week on route to Swartz Bay, B.C. Ferry Corp. officials said Tuesday.

However, they said no details of the accident will be released until an investigation by Transport Canada is completed.

The ferry is expected to be out of service service for at least a month and repairs will cost close to $1 million.

The ferry's damaged gearbox will probably have to be replaced.

The ferry was hung up on a reef in Active Pass for about 14 hours until it was pulled free by tugs.

Forest douser ablaze

A water bomber which caught fire while fighting a forest fire has caused just one more problem for the harried B.C. Forest Service.

A Canso water bomber, owned by Flying Fireman Ltd., a company that works out of Pat Bay Airport, caught fire Monday near Port Alberni. While the pilot was able to land the plane safely in nearby Sproat Lake to douse the flames, burning debris falling from the wing started some smaller fires in the woods.

The plane was under contract to the forest service and the new fires were attacked by the remaining fire bombers in the area Tuesday and brought under control, a forest service spokesman said.

A Flying Fireman spokesman said Tuesday the company was still trying to determine the cause of the fire, which broke out in the plane's right engine and caused damage to the wing and body, putting the plane out of action idefinitely.

"We've no idea what caused it—engine, electrical, or what," he said.

They hitched ride to a horror tale

By CP and staff

A Victoria teenager, who along with her wounded boyfriend spent six nightmarish nights held captive by an armed man, said she was not killed because she stayed calm.

Dena Vinqvist left a note saying, "Please help, this is no joke," in a Hinton, Alta. gas station on Monday and RCMP ended the ordeal 15 minutes later with the arrest of Denis McCullough, 38, who had been out on a day pass from Kingston Penitentiary.

A police spokesman said McCullough was in custody in Edmonton while authorities continue the investigation.

The incident began Aug. 5 in Sudbury, Ont. when Miss Vinqvist, of 1525 Hillside, and Philip White, who lived in a Gorge Road apartment, and on the homeward leg of a hitchhiking trip, were picked up by a man heading west.

White . . . stabbed in lung

There was no sign of trouble until Winnipeg, where Miss Vinqvist wanted to stop to purchase a gift for a girlfriend.

McCullough refused and pulled out a knife, forcing White to sit under the dashboard of the car.

Dena said McCullough, now in custody in Edmonton, gave them two stories.

The first was that he had been involved in a heroin ring and had to get a boat so that he could escape to an island in the South Pacific.

Later, McCullough told them the truth—that he was an escaper from Kingston Penitentiary.

"He said he wanted to be free, that's all he wanted," Dena recalled.

Later that night, as the two 17-year-olds slept in the back seat, White was stabbed in the back.

"I thought he was dead," Miss Vinqvist said. "There was blood everywhere. He had a hole in his lung so there was a horrible sound and blood kept spurting out."

Miss Vinqvist kept pleading with the man to allow White to live "so he said 'I'll stitch him up.' " And he did, closing White's wound with a safety pin and a needle and thread.

"From that point on it was just straight driving. He changed his mind and decide he had to get Philip to Victoria as soon as possible."

Garbage bylaw 'unfair'

Further details were obtained Tuesday on the B.C. Supreme Court judgment which relegated the city of Victoria's garbage disposal bylaw to the trash can.

Mr. Justice Lloyd McKenzie of the B.C. Supreme Court quashed the bylaw as unreasonable and unfair because it created a class of property occupiers who were denied the fee-free garbage collection service.

The action was started by Elsie Wedman, a Victoria apartment owner who said the bylaw should be quashed because it discriminated against apartment owners and occupiers.

The bylaw entitled the occupier of each parcel of land in the city to free removal 50 time a year of the contents of two garbage cans. The occupants of a single dwelling or the owner of an apartment building would be entitled to free service, while tenants in the apartment building would not.

The judge said, however, each owner of a condominium, because he owns a strata lot, qualified as the occupier of a parcel of land and the free service.

He said there is no question that a double standard existed and the only excuse for it was a commercial one, because the annual cost of free garbage collection from Victoria's 22,561 apartment units, at the rate of one can each a week, would be $679,507.

"It is quite apparent that the city of Victoria finds it convenient to include in its budget an amount which must be raised by municipal taxes to fund the cost of collecting garbage from property owners, i.e. municipal taxpayers.

"It then offers 'free' removal of the two cans from the premises of each property owner."

He said that since the apartment dweller does not pay municipal taxes he must pay for his garbage removals on the fee scale stipulated by the bylaw.

The judge said the city was empowered under the Municipal Act to establish a scale of charges payable to owners or occupiers, but took the "or" at face value and defined occupiers so as to give the word a different meaning which applied to property owners and property tenants.

Conquer Cancer drive goes well over the top

The 1979 Conquer Cancer campaign for Greater Victoria has for the first time surpassed its fund-raising goal, and funds are still coming in.

Vancouver Island co-ordinator Wilf Burton said "this is the first time we have really topped the $200,000 figure, although in previous years we have come close."

Making the achievement even more noteworthy is that the Saanich peninsula returns have been included in past years, but this year were not. Two fund-raising units in Central Saanich and Sidney/North Saanich raised another $20,000 on their own.

Total contributions from Vancouver Island are expected to amount to more than $425,000 of the provincial target of $1.6 million. The campaign, which raises funds for cancer research, service to cancer patients, and education programs, ends Sept. 30.

Union bargainers turn down offer to Hydro workers

A new contract offer from B.C. Hydro to 3,700 clerical, office and related employees has been rejected by a union bargaining team on a number of grounds including a claim that it discriminates against lower-paid workers.

The Office and Technical Employees Union, armed with a strike mandate since June, has asked provincial mediator Jack Chapelas to file his report with Labor Minister Allan Williams.

It said in a prepared statement Tuesday it would await Williams' confirmation that the mediator has reported out before considering job action. No steps would be taken prior to a meeting of job stewards next Wednesday.

Half of the employees involved are on the Lower Mainland. The union says there are about 150 in Victoria and others elsewhere on Vancouver Island.

According to union negotiating committee chairman Fred de Moor, Hydro tabled an offer through the mediator that would increase wages by 6½ per cent retroactive to April 1, 1½ per cent next Oct. 1 and another 7 per cent on April 1, 1980, as part of a two-year package. He said, however, that the retroactive pay offered would not be calculated on gross earnings in the usual fashion, but only on straight time.

De Moor said cash increases of $55, $15 and $60 a month were offered to lower paid cafeteria and security personnel and that the final hike would amount to about four per cent—considerably less than that earmarked for those already earning more money.

He said the overall offer substantially erodes historic wage relationships, is "discriminatory toward certain lower-paid employees and contains several management proposals that take away or reduce conditions and provisions previously negotiated."

The last position taken by the union called for wage increases of 9.2 per cent in the first year and seven per cent in the second, along with cost-of-living adjustments. In addition it wanted salary scale adjustments it said would amount to about two per cent in the first year.

De Moor said the average wage would be about $1,500 a month under terms of an agreement that expired March 31.

On June 4 employees voted 87 per cent in favor of a strike, but bargaining continued until July 20 when the union served strike notice.

Aid in sight for ex-POWs

British MP Airey Neave died last March in a terrorist attack outside Parliament but his efforts on behalf of former prisoners of war are still being felt.

Seven former POWs and victims of Nazi concentration camps may receive compensation from the German government through the efforts of Neave and a Victoria man, Norman Rubenstein.

Rubenstein, president of the B.C. chapter of the National Prisoners of War Association, European Theatre, said Tuesday in an interview that the Australian ombudsman had recommended that the Australian and New Zealand governments negotiate with the German government for compensation for the men.

Both Rubenstein and Neave, who was MP for Abingdon and right-hand man to Margaret Thatcher when she was leader of the Opposition, applied pressure for some time to have the men compensated.

The seven men are from Australia and New Zealand. During the Second World War they were in various prisoner of war camps. They also spent time in concentration camps.

Neave was assassinated last March by a car bomb. Two Irish guerrilla groups claimed responsibility for the attack.

Neave had worked on behalf of former prisoners of war who had difficulty obtaining their pensions.

Neave and Rubenstein, who also works on behalf of former POWs, were captured together in Calais in 1940.

Just a plane dropout

Massive branch from large plane tree at Margaret Jenkins Elementary school in Fairfield is cut up by school district workmen after falling to the ground Tuesday. No one was injured and no damage occurred to school property, but trees will be examined to determine their safety before school opens next month, school district spokesman said. Fall is attributed to wind and long dry spell which has made trees more brittle than usual.

VISITORS COMPLAIN OF JOGGERS, BIKERS

Sidewalks taken over by wheelers

Joggers, cyclists and riders of skateboards are taking over Victoria sidewalks and there appears to be little the city can do to solve the problem.

This was the consensus after a brief but free-wheeling debate by city council's traffic committee Tuesday.

A letter from Tourism B.C. operations services director William Taylor, citing complaints received from visitors, sparked the discussion.

Tourists had complained of being "practically run over by a roller-skater on Government Street," and of "old men and ladies walking along the waterfront being pushed off the sidewalk by joggers," Taylor wrote.

He also gave complaints of bicycles being ridden on downtown sidewalks.

Committee chairman Ald. William McElroy said he was attempting to draft a bylaw allowing cyclists to use sidewalks on some of the city's heavily-congested streets.

"I'm in the process of finding out if we have authority to draft such a document," he said.

"But what we need is a common decency bylaw. It's obviously impossible to do anything about this problem."

The discussion ended on a hilarous note as traffic engineer Derek Wild, responding to a question from city manager James Bramley about the fine for riding a bicycle on a sidewalk, said: "I would have to look that up. I believe it would mean a loss of demerit points."

Aldermen quickly received and filed Taylor's letter.

Laden wallet missing

A large sum of money was "lost or stolen" about 5 p.m. Tuesday in the Juan de Fuca recreation centre area of Colwood, Colwood RCMP said Tuesday.

The money was in a black leather wallet with some credit cards, police said. They would not divulge the amount of money or the name of the wallet owner.

City's approach cautious

Mayor won't be rushed into changing region plan

Victoria city council's planning committee is not going to be rushed into giving carte blanche approval to an amended bylaw aimed at tightening loopholes in the Capital Region District plan.

The committee agreed Tuesday to tell the board it could not support the document until the changes had been reviewed by staff members and debated by council.

Region directors gave the bylaw three readings last week and referred it to the individual councils and electoral area committees for comment. The bylaw will be presented for final adoption Aug. 22.

Mayor Michael Young said the plan undoubtedly needed changing, "but it should not be a patched-up job with no thought process involved."

The city, he said, wanted time to reflect on the fairly extensive changes in the bylaw.

"I have certain misgivings about the regional plan as it now exists," he said, "but I'm not going to be rushed into supporting the amendments. There's too much at stake."

Young also levelled a blast at Saanich council members who criticized city planning staff for not participating in a meeting called by Saanich and regional planners.

"Our planners were given very little advance notice of the meeting," he said. "I'm a little fed up with the innuendo and statements made by elected and municipal officials about our absence."

Agreement redefining what constituted a regional shopping centre was reached at the meeting between Saanich chief planner Gil Laurenson and acting regional planner Charles Wakelin, he observed.

The draft agreement between Saanich and the region was referred to the regional plan committee and the municipalities.

It provides for definitions of neighborhood, district, regional and central area shopping centres. District centres over 175,000 square feet or within half a mile of a municipal boundary would have to be approved by the region under the agreement.

CITY ORDERS DEVELOPER TO LIVE UP TO CONTRACT

A Victoria developer who chopped down two trees and drastically pruned another on the site of a five-storey condominium and restaurant at Niagara and Dallas Road, came within a whisker Tuesday of having his land-use contract revoked by Victoria city council's land management committee.

Foster Isherwood, through his development consultant Brian Jaundrew, admitted violating the contract.

Aldermen, after severely reprimanding the developer, voted to recommend to council a building permit be issued subject to an assurance that the project not deviate from the contract.

In other business, the committee:

- Will review next year a request by tennis players for the repainting of courts at Beacon Hill.
- Agreed to a lease agreement with the Victoria Association for the Care of the Dying for space at 1947 Cook Street.

Wheelchair-ramp buses on trial

Four B.C. Hydro buses equipped with hydraulic wheelchair ramps could be in regular service next month on the Beacon Hill run, Victoria city council's traffic committee was told Tuesday.

The buses would run for a six-month trial period and, if the program was successful, other buses would be equipped with wheelchair ramps.

The project is believed to be the first of its kind in Canada.

The driver will push a button which will cause the front steps to unfold into a platform. The wheelchair is rolled onto the platform and lifted until it is level with the bus floor.

In other transit developments, aldermen agreed to a routing change on the Beacon Hill service and a minor route change in the downtown area for South Fairfield buses.

Pair lose watches to knife wielder

A man in his 20s, armed with a five-inch hunting knife, held up a couple Tuesday night who were parked at the lookout in Beacon Hill Park, Victoria police said.

The two were robbed of their watches.

The suspect, who had a slim build and dark hair to his collar, fled on foot.

City police were investigating.

Police blame park crime rate on gays

A meeting place for homosexuals near Lover's Lane in the northeast corner of Beacon Hill Park will not be reopened to cars as recommended by the police department, Victoria city council's parks department decided Tuesday.

The lane, near Cook Street and Dallas Road, is in a wooded area and police asked that one-way traffic be allowed as a crime prevention measure.

Numerous robberies and six incidents of indecent acts on children of both sexes had occurred in that area of the park in the last few months, according to a police report.

Sporadic surveillance in the last three weeks had shown between five and 20 males, identified as homosexual and attempting to meet someone of similar persuasion, frequenting the area, aldermen were told.

The high incidence of crime in the relatively small uninhabited area was directly attributable to the number of homosexuals gathered there, the report stated.

More effective policing of the area was hindered by barricades at either end of the lane, erected following a fatal accident some years ago. Public pressure later resulted in traffic being banned from using the lane.

"Members of the public seldom use the lane, thereby leaving the woods to the homosexuals," the report stated.

Increased traffic movement and stepped up police patrols would, it was hoped, deter the high frequency of indecent exhibitions, molesting and robberies, aldermen heard.

Mayor Michael Young urged the committee to not treat the matter lightly "as I've read police reports and if we have a similar situation elsewhere in the city we're in real trouble."

Ald. William McElroy said opening the lane would give carte blanche to "a couple of cowboys to go whipping through there and decide to solve the homosexual problem."

Parks administrator Alan Smith suggested either replacing the barriers with locked gates to allow only police access, or opening the road and restricting it to police and maintenance vehicles.

However, a majority of the committee felt these suggestions would not be a workable solution.
